Lancaster Farming

Vol. 44 No. 28 | Four Sections | Lancaster Farming, Saturday, May 15, 1999 | $31.00 Per Year | 60¢ Per Copy

Flowers, meadows, and woodlands are springing forth with green and colorful foliage as the dry, warm weather the last several weeks has brought the vegetation into full bloom. Earlier April rains gave way to below normal rainfall for the first half of May. This has allowed almost every day this month to be excellent for fieldwork. The planting of corn, oats, and potatoes has progressed rapidly. According to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service, soybeans also have been planted and barley and wheat started to head. Rye was being harvested for silage and hay, and pastures were in mostly good to excellent condition across the region. One of the beauty spots in southern Lancaster County each year is the expansive bank of mountain pink growing at the entrance of Lloyd and Sue Miller's farm on Bell Road, south of Nine Points. For 30 years the bank to their farm lane has heralded the approach of the new growing season with a blast of color. To add to the scene last Sunday afternoon, their daughter Theresa Winters brought her Paint horse named Flair into the picture. Photo by Everett Newswanger, editor.

House Ag Committee Amends Dairy Compact Legislation

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The state House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee on Tuesday approved an amended version of Senate-approved Dairy Compact legislation.

Because of the death of a member of the House of Representatives, the committee met a day earlier than scheduled to consider Senate Bill 365 — proposed legislation that would authorize Pennsylvania to join the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact, should the federal Legislature and President Clinton reauthorize the Compact beyond its scheduled end Sept. 30.

Three amendments were added in committee, and though a number of members expressed concern about the wisdom of creating an expanded Compact, and including Pennsylvania, the legislation was approved by all with the exception of one "no" vote by Rep. C. Alan Egolf, R-86th District (Cumberland, Franklin and Perry counties).

Technically, the bill was moved

Mere 'Science Fiction' Now, New Poultry Vaccine Research Proceeds

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Call it "poultry science fiction," but scientists are working toward several future possibilities for the birds — DNA vaccines that "infect" the bird without fear of developing clinical signs, boosting the bird's own immune system . . . placing disease parameters right into the genes that can be turned off and on at will. . . or developing a viable vaccine for campylobacter, a poultry pathogen that can cause life-threatening illness in humans.

All these possibilities for future vaccines were discussed Monday by Dr. John P. Donahoe, president of Maine Biological Laboratories, Waterville, Maine.

Donahoe spoke to about 30 poultry producers and agri-industry representatives at the Poultry Health and Management Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant near Manheim.

There are some downfalls to this type of research, at least so far, Donahoe indicated. First, in light of food safety issues in the industry, developing vaccines for campylobacter and e. coli have been a real challenge, he said. However, early research does "not look good on campylobacter," he said.

"The vaccines are not working," he told industry representatives at the seminar. "We're getting nowhere."

Other types of vaccine research, such as for salmonella, have been making excellent progress. One vaccine on salmonella type D has been working almost too good, he said, with more research needed. Work on developing vaccines and treatments for e coli have been improving.

But, for a variety of reasons, work on campylobacter has been frustrating.

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO
Wed May 12, 1999

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Wheat and corn bids were higher in reaction to USDA reports. Soybean bids were slightly lower. Wheat 1 to 6 cents higher. Corn 1 to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 1 to 2 cents higher. Soybeans 2 to 4 cents lower. Wheat bids were stronger due to USDA's sharp drop in world wheat ending stocks figures for 2000. It fell from 137 to 118 million metric tons. They also put Chinese production at only 106 million metric tons and show- ed a sharp drop in EU stocks. USDA raised projected old crop corn exports by 25 million bushels. Planting delays in the Western Corn Belt due to rain, supported corn bids. Forecasts are calling for more rainfall in the Dakotas/ Western Minnesota over the next week. Declines were seen in soybean pits. USDA released a very bearish new crop ending stocks number (595 million bushels) but that was in line with pre-report estimates. Delayed corn planting in the Western Corn Belt could see these acreages go to soybeans. USDA cut Argentina's crop estimate to 18.5 million metric tons, limiting declines. Export announcements have been slow to come this week for all commodities.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

MAY 17-23, 1999

SHAVUOT, MAY 21.

WILD HORSES

If wild horses couldn't keep you away, no doubt you made your way to Churchill Downs, the racetrack in Louisville, Kentucky, for the annual Kentucky Derby. May 17 marks the anniversary of the first "Run for the Roses" in 1875. While visiting the Bluegrass State, you might want to stop at Bowling Green, home of the popular American sports car, the Corvette, or see the National (Boy) Scouting Museum on the Murray State University campus. Keep scouting around for a replica of Abraham Lincoln's boyhood cabin, near Hodgenville, or another replica, Old Fort Boonesborough, originally built by Daniel Boone in 1775

One of the worst things that can happen in life is to win a bet on a horse at an early age . . .

– Danny McGoorty

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Use tuna cans with the top and bottom removed as collars around seedlings to discourage cutworms.

CREAM OF ASPARAGUS SOUP

2 pounds asparagus
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 small onion, chopped
1 cup white wine or chicken stock
1 cube chicken bouillon
1 cup milk
2 cups cream (light or heavy, to your taste)

Remove tips from asparagus and set aside. Chop the rest and simmer with all the ingredients except the cream, for about a half hour. Puree in the blender, and then return to the heat, adding cream and seasoning to taste. Steam asparagus tips briefly until just tender, and use to garnish the soup. Makes 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If bees stay at home, rain will come soon. If they fly away, fine will be the day.

A May flood never did anyone good.

Dry May, wet June.

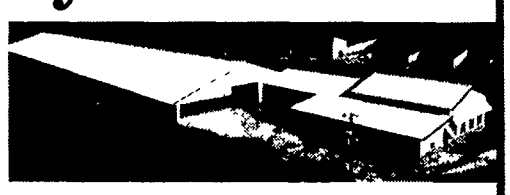
The Building you want.
The Lease you need.



Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs as little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

First: Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost.

OPINION

Farmers Need To Know The Real Market Value Of Their Products

Since most producers of agricultural products are in the position of being "price takers" rather than setting their own prices, it is especially important that they have the best information possible on the actual market value of their products. Often market prices are published by the marketer to the best advantage of the buyer. Or the price for the livestock or produce to the farmer is not known until it is partly processed and in the distribution chain before a price is set. In this case, the farmer has no recourse if the price is not satisfactory.

In this day of low commodity prices and tight markets, the producers have little time to play guessing games about where to market their products. Legislation that would provide a price reporting system that supplies timely, accurate data on what packers are paying would remove much of the guess work producers have to go through in selling their products. The reason we call for legislation is that we already have a system of market reporting to be done by USDA, but the job is not being done. With funding cuts, the time and scope of unbiased market price reporting has become very limited. In addition, the packers don't want the farmers to know what they are paying.

Since an increasing number of livestock, both beef and pork, are sold under some form of contract, it is extremely important that information related to volume, prices paid, and the terms of these contracts be reported in an accurate and timely fashion. At the same time, most of these contracts are linked to cash prices, so we need accurate and timely reporting of cash prices as well.

Producers really need to know the procurement costs for the packer rather than just the open market price being paid on a particular day. Since fewer and fewer animals are being bought on the open market system, plant procurement costs would give producers a much better idea what the actual value of their animals are to the packing plant.

This all boils down to the fact that farmers should have access to competitive markets for price discovery that accurately determines the value of their products. They also need a reporting system that leads to the development of a better farm-to-retail price series. Many producers felt cheated by the prices they were receiving in relation to the retail price being reported by USDA. And rightly so. But the fact is that no one actually knows what the real price spread was during this time when we saw such low prices at the farm gate. But it is obvious that if a better formula were developed, producers, processors, and consumers would benefit from having information that more accurately shows the farm-to-retail spread in prices.

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

Kathy Heil, Lancaster County Executive Director of the Farm Service Agency, reminds all dairy farmers that May 21 is the last day to apply for their share of payment under the Dairy Market Loss Assistance Program. Each farm operation producing milk in the fourth quarter of 1998 may apply. Farmers may use the higher of the 1997 or 1998 milk production, up to 2.6 million pounds, to determine actual payments.

United States Department of Agriculture estimates a payment of 18 to 20 cents per hundredweight will be made to qualified dairy farmers. To sign up the producer will need to provide the number of pounds of milk they produced. Payments will be made about three weeks after the end of the sign up period. Contact your local Farm Service Agency office before May 21 to process your application to this program.=20

To Understand Dry Weather

While it may be a little early to call the past period of little rain a drought, it may have been dry enough that herbicides may not work. Dry weather may affect the performance of both soil applied and post emergence herbicides.

According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, all soil applied herbicides require some rain to activate them. In general, a minimum of one half inch of rainfall should occur within 7 to 10 days after the herbicide application or weeds may emerge without being controlled by the herbicide.

Less mobile herbicides like Prowl, Atrazine, Scepter and deeper germinating weeds like nutsedge will require more rainfall to be effective. When rain is delayed beyond the 7 to 10 day period, herbicide performance may be enhanced and small germinating weeds may be removed with a soil mixing operation.

Two good options to mix the herbicide into the surface layer of the soil are the rotary hoe or spike tooth harrow. The optimum time for this is when the weeds are just breaking through the soil surface and the corn is less than 5 inches tall or soybeans should be just past full emergence.

If dry weather continues, post applied herbicides may not work either. Weeds under dry conditions are not actively growing, making them harder to kill. This may be the year to get the old cultivator out and make sure it is in working condition so when the time comes you are ready.

To Produce High Quality Alfalfa

Producing high quality alfalfa at home means the dairy farmer may reduce the purchase of off farm feeds. Studies in Pennsylvania over many years have shown that one way to maximize the quality of alfalfa hay is to harvest early. According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, deciding when to harvest is difficult, especially for the first cutting of the year. Other farming operations, like planting corn, often interfere with the first alfalfa harvest.

Research has shown that one way to determine the optimum time to harvest the first cutting of alfalfa each year is by calculating the number of growing degree days (GDD) accumulated beginning on April 1.

The GDD which works best is base 41 degrees. GDD is calculated by adding the high and low temperature for each day and then dividing by two to calculate the average temperature for the day. From the average you subtract 41. The answer is the number of GDD base 41 for that day. By adding together each day's GDD you obtain the season's total.

Research has shown when the season total reaches 700, alfalfa will be near its maximum feeding value. Local weather data for Lancaster County shows that over the last 12 years, the earliest 700 GDD was reached was May 13, 1991 and the latest was May 21, 1989. The average date was reached between May 16 and 17

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

A FRIEND OF JESUS

May 16, 1999

Background Scripture:
John 15:1-17
Devotional Reading:
Job 23:1-12

I attended a memorial service for a former neighbor. The man had garnered many titles and honors during his life, but, said the minister, this man chose to be known simply as "a friend of Jesus." That said it all.

In those last days of his earthly ministry, Jesus paid hid disciples the highest of compliments: "No longer do I call you servants . . . but I have called you friends, for all that I have heard from my Father I have made known to you" (15:15).

We use the term "friend" so variably and widely that it may not necessarily convey all that we mean by it. When Jesus speaks of his disciples as "friends," he denotes a much firmer, deeper relationship. It is a friendship of mutual love, respect and service. A friend is someone upon whom you can depend when you need them.

Jesus chose an analogy from the Old Testament to describe his kind of friendship. In Ps. 80:8-16, Jer. 2:21, Ezek. 5:1-8; 19:10-14 and Isa. 5:1-7, Israel is identified as God's tender vine that he plants and nourishes. Jesus uses the same analogy in the parable of the vineyard in Mk. 12:1-12 (also Matt. 21:33-46; Lk. 20:9-19). In John 15, Jesus has carried this analogy one step further: "I am the true vine and my Father is the vinedresser" (15:1).

'I AM THE VINE'

He links the relationship between God and himself with that of his friends: "I am the vine, you are the branches" (15:5). Jesus' discourse on himself as "the true vine" and his disciples as the "branches" is an artistic rather than scientific description of the Christian's mystical relationship. Several key words are used repeatedly like a weaver using different strands in a tapestry. The allusion "branches" occurs five times, bearing "fruit" seven times and "abide"/"abiding" 11 times.

Obviously the relationship between God the "vinedresser," Christ the "true vine," and his disciples, the "branches," is a very close and deep one. Just as a vine is a living thing that grows and develops, so there is a living, growing connection between all three. John uses terms which have usually been translated into English as "abide" and "abiding" — terms not much used anymore. The only times I can remember using it is in reading the scripture or singing "Abide With Me."

My dictionary says that it can mean any of the following: to remain, continue, stay, dwell, reside, continue in a particular condition, attitude, relationship, wait for, endure, sustain, put up with, tolerate, stand, accept without opposition. The Jerusalem Bible renders "abide" as "Make your home in me." Moffet: "remain." NEB: "Dwell." Living Bible: "live in me" and "stay in me." TCNT: "remain united to me." Phillips: "You must go on growing in me" and "share my life." ABUV: "continue." Knox: "if you do not live on in me." Wms: "remain in union." All of these indicate the very closest of relationships between Christ and his disciples, as well as between Christ and the Father.

BE FRUITFUL

This relationship, however, is not just something for us to enjoy. As with real branches of a vine, it is expected by both the vinedresser and the vine that we will bear fruit. "As the branch cannot bear fruit by itself, unless it abides in the vine, neither can you, unless you abide in me" (15:4). Bearing fruit is not an optional activity for the branch: "By this my Father is glorified, that you bear much fruit, and so prove to be my disciples." Fruit, not words, creeds, or declarations, is the proof of discipleship.

"If you keep my commandments, you will abide in my love, just as I have kept my Father's commandments and abide in his love" (10). And the commandment? "This is my commandment, that you love one another as I have loved you. Greater love has no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

This passage is both inspiring and challenging. When we examine our relationship with Christ, we must ask ourselves if this relationship is that of a true friend or merely an acquaintance. As someone has put it, "A friend is one who comes in when the whole world has gone out." That's the friendship that Christ offers to us and asks of us. Acquaintanceship is not nearly enough.

We'd Like To Introduce Ourselves.

We're Northwest Savings Bank – Northwest for short – and we offer CD's, savings accounts, mortgages, checking accounts, home equity loans and all the services you expect from a bank (and good ones at that). With over 80 offices in Pennsylvania, including four here in Lancaster County with more to come, we offer all the convenience you're after as well. However, what we're really defined by are the small-town values that we grew up with. Where a handshake means something, neighbors help one another, and a hard day's work is something to be proud of. Enough about us though. We'd like to get to know you better. Visit us when we open our new offices on May 20th in Elizabethtown and New Holland.

Opening May 20 in Elizabethtown and New Holland.

Our first 50 visitors will receive a free Passbook Savings Account bearing from $1 to $100.

NORTHWEST SAVINGS BANK
A Century of Service.

Other offices to serve you in Lancaster, Lititz, Mt. Joy and Columbia.

Berks Teachers Get A Taste Of Making Bologna, Tour Farms

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — "Further processing" — it's become a catchword for not only the ag industry, but others as well.

But "further processing" takes on new meaning when it comes to making bologna.

But while smoked sausage makers begin to feel the heat from environmental protection agencies to cut the outside smoke, new technologies, better equipment, improved handling, and a constant eye on food safety have always been at the center of Lebanon bologna-making techniques.

About 26 teachers who participate in the Ag In The Classroom program toured a bologna processing facility and sampled various products Tuesday near Lebanon. There they learned how the industry began, how it progressed, how it changed, and where it stands today.

Dan Baum, plant manager for the Daniel Weaver Company Fine Meats, provided the tour. Later in the day, additional tours included a beef cow/calf producer and a feedlot in the Womelsdorf area.

Weaver has been in business since 1885. Baum said the plant was the site of the original commercial Lebanon-style bologna operation in the U.S. That type of semi-dried, fermented sausage uses all beef and has no additives or extenders (such as soy protein isolates).

The bologna, which sells for about $2.15 a pound wholesale and $2.85 a pound retail, like many sausage-type products, makes use of culled animals — old dairy cows and bulls. It's been a consistent form of lunch meat at many deli counters, at home, in restaurants, and elsewhere.

The meat from the older animals is ground up, mixed with bacteria, water, spices, and other fermenting/curing agents, wrapped, and processed in the smokehouse to an internal temperature of 120 degrees. In the past, the meat was hung for up to two weeks in smokehouses constructed of oak and cedar.

Now, with different techniques and smoking methods, the product is smoked inside the plant in stainless-steel lined lockers that can process it much sooner — in about 24 hours.

Baum said he primarily handles the "microbiological" end of the processing, including "meat technology." He ensures the proper bacteria are present during fermentation, the lockers are at proper temperatures and relative humidity, and overall quality control is maintained.

The meat is purchased already slaughtered, boneless, and run in a block grinder. The grinder can grind up to about 300 pounds a minute. The meat is moved to a large mixer, where spices, salt, sugar, and curing agents are added. Sugars are especially important to the sweet bologna line they sell.

Food safety is top concern at the plant. Baum, who said he believes the issues of food safety have been blown out of proportion, noted that because of the presence of bacteria in the fermentation process, other harmful bacteria are excluded. According to Baum, the public should understand it's impossible to come up with a bacteria-free product, even when processing standard lunch meat.

The meat is stuffed into casings, called "stockinettes," and placed into the all-stainless steel lockers or "smokehouses." A key to a quality, consistent product, according to Baum, is working on the correct microbiological aspects, coming up with the right "bacteria mix," a product of much research and development on Weaver's part.

Some of the lockers inside the plant are manually controlled and some are computer-driven. Baum showed the tour group a locker smoking the beef stick product line — 7,000 pounds of beef stick in one smokehouse locker. One locker had three hours worth of smoking. The product is all beef, with no extenders (including soy protein isolates and others). The beef sticks make use of livestock quarters and chucks.

Also, round cuts and tenderloin are used, depending on the final product.

An important part of the "further processing" is that, to get the taste consumers want, the use of the natural animal fat in the product is critical. "The only thing that has flavor in the meat is the fat," he told the group.

But because of improved technology and techniques, fermentation processing time has been shortened through the years. Also, where the conventional, old-time, outside smokehouses used coal and sawdust to create the smoke, processing inside the plant in the lockers involves the use of liquid or ionized smoke.

Also, a lot of the equipment used to make bologna is manufactured in Germany. The German-made equipment, including the computers used, are sticklers for detail.

Some of the lockers inside the plant are manually controlled and some are computer-driven. Baum showed the tour group a locker that was smoking the beef stick product line — 7,000 pounds of beef stick in one smokehouse locker. One locker, in back of Baum, center, had three hours worth of smoking.

The exterior smokehouses are sometimes used for hams and bacon, Baum noted. However, more than ever, Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulations are becoming stricter for outside smokehouses.

The modern ways of producing bologna do not necessarily mean a more consistent product, according to Baum. But, he said, the product is safer.

"Does it taste better?" he said. "It's difficult to say."

Those who want to enjoy the bologna need to understand exactly how the product is prepared. Baum noted that, more than ever, students have "no concept of where food comes from or how it gets (on the kitchen table)."

The tour group also visited the MAP farm operated by Mike Firestine of the agrifinance department of Fulton Financial and affiliates. Firestine operates a 30-head Polled Hereford cow/calf operation in addition to a pick-your-own pumpkin operation.

At the farm used by Firestine owned by Fred Krott, Myerstown, 20 brood cows and calves were feeding in the grazing paddocks on 20 acres. About 10 heifers are kept on another farm in Richland, noted Firestine.

Firestine farms with his wife, Martine, who raises purebred Hampshire and Corriedale sheep on the farm, and daughters Morgan, the state Polled Hereford princess and Margeaux, the state Polled Hereford queen. Firestine continues to raise show cattle that are top quality, with a lot of muscle, he noted to the group.

At the Krott farm, Firestine said that the cows and calves are grazed for about five days in the paddock. He is in the process of revitalizing the pasture at the Krott farm and spoke about his field management.

Firestine noted to the group that he used grain to entice the herd to come into the grass paddock. "It's like giving candy to a baby," he said.

One of the cows, 57W from Bear Tooth Ranch (the Mel Gibson ranch) in Columbus, Mont., was the mother of the grand champion at the Farm Show. He spoke about the 85 percent success rate in conception of the cow/calf enterprise.

Firestine also houses an Angus for On Fire Youth Ministry for Ken Winebark.

The cows are kept, Firestine told the group, as long as they continue to produce a calf up to 600 pounds. The 57W cow is 12 years old.

Soon after, the group toured the 124-acre Glenn Martin farm near Womelsdorf. Martin, who will soon be converting to dairy, finishes 75 Angus crossbred steers and sells them at auction. One pen held 75 the night of the tour, with a capacity of 250.

Martin feeds a total mixed ration of corn silage, high-moisture shelled corn, and a 42 percent protein supplement. No hay is fed.

The cattle, purchased in Virginia, are brought in at 450-600 pounds, finished to 1,300 pounds, and sold at auction. Martin tries to finish the steers to medium size to ensure they are well-muscled with not too much finish.

Martin, who is remodeling a barn for dairy freestall units, also has a 150-sow farrow-to-finish swine operation. He finishes 2,500 hogs for Hatfield.

He intends to eventually have 75 registered and grade Holstein at the farm.

Martin farms with wife, Esther, and sons Mike, 27; Glenn Jr., 17; and Brian, 13.

At the farm used by Firestine owned by Fred Krott, Myerstown, 20 brood cows and calves were feeding in the grazing paddocks on 20 acres. About 10 heifers are kept on another farm in Richland, noted Firestine.

Farm Bureau Administrator Addresses Members

SYRACUSE N.Y. – New York Farm Bureau Administrator Jeff Kirby addressed the nearly 500 delegate-members and guests at the organization's 42nd annual meeting.

Kirby, who was named administrator in October, spoke of the new and exciting plans for the coming year.

In his address, Kirby spoke about the new computer technology being developed for New York Farm Bureau operations, new positions within the organization, and monies being budgeted for new initiatives to support and assist county Farm Bureaus. Kirby highlighted the benefits of each of these programs for the organization and the members.

His remarks to the delegates and guest included, "...I am very pleased to have become New York Farm Bureau's new administrator, but I am also very proud. The reason that I am proud to have become the organization's administrator is people like you – Farm Bureau people like you, and Farm Bureau members before you, who have built the organization for decades from the grassroots. Farm Bureau people who have established the organization's longstanding reputation as a trustworthy, straightforward, hardworking, credible, tough, reasonable, fair, honest, and strong advocate of agricultural interests, and of New York agriculture."

Kirby said, "New York Farm Bureau carries a lot of clout because of that well-deserved reputation, and a lot of responsibility as well. I am proud by association to have been chosen to help lead and direct our Farm Bureau organization in addressing the challenges of the future while maintaining the guiding principles, high standards, and respected reputation that Farm Bureau members like yourselves have established so well. Thank you for that opportunity."

Kirby grew up on a 180-acre farm in Delaware County, where the family raised everything from horses and beef cattle, to chickens, turkeys and pigs. He attended Cornell University's College of Agriculture and Life Sciences and was graduated with a degree in agricultural economics and business management in 1990. In 1983, Jeff was graduated from Vermont Law School. Jeff and his wife Debbie lived in Rexford, N.Y. with their two young daughters.

Gov. Ridge Strengthens Rural Development Council

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Gov. Tom Ridge has signed an executive order strengthening the Pennsylvania Rural Development Council and recognizing its work on behalf of Pennsylvania's almost 4 million rural residents.

The Council advises the governor and state agencies on rural issues and promotes interagency and intergovernmental cooperation.

In 1995, Gov. Ridge moved the Rural Development Council's office to Harrisburg from a state agency regional office and greatly expanded the resources available to the Council.

"Rural Pennsylvanians — who constitute almost a quarter of our population — have an advocate right in the governor's office," Gov. Ridge said. "This is extremely important, because Pennsylvania has the largest rural population of any state in the nation."

Under Ridge's executive order, the Rural Development Council's responsibilities include:

- Fostering expanded economic and social opportunities for rural residents;
- Serving as an advocate for rural communities and their residents;
- Working to improve the coordination and effectiveness of federal, state and local government programs affecting rural areas, and to promote enhanced intergovernmental cooperation;
- Serving as a liaison with federal and local government agencies; and
- Promoting community-based problem-solving strategies to meet the challenges faced by rural communities in an innovative, holistic and effective way.

"Collaborative partnerships, like the Rural Development Council, work well in breaking down the artificial barriers that stand in the way of what government agencies, the private sector and others must do to meet the needs of our fellow Pennsylvanians," Gov. Ridge said.

"The Rural Development Council provides a neutral forum where representatives of various interests can come together to address issues of common concern. Its goal is not to duplicate what others are doing, but rather to make others' efforts more productive."

Among the current projects of the Council's committees are identifying value-added economic development strategies for agricultural and forest products; coordinating the commonwealth's Timber Bridge Program; developing innovative techniques to help small communiues with the installation of water and sewer systems; reducing the administrative burden of government agencies' environmental assessment requirements; and promoting the development of affordable housing.

The Council hosts quarterly Rural Issues Forums which provide rural residents with an opportunity to interact with senior level government officials.

Topics at the forums range from welfare reform and education reform to transportation planning and environmental issues. The forums connect 11 sites across the state via two-way, fully interactive video-conferencing technology.

The Pennsylvania Rural Development Council is governed by a board of directors consisting of six members from each of the five membership groups and is presided over by three co-chairs: one representing state agencies; a second representing federal government agencies; and the third representing others who participate in its activities.

Information on the Council, its quarterly forums, or other activities can be obtained by contacting: 506 Finance Building, Harrisburg, PA 17120; (717) 705-0359; or jdudick@gois.state.pa.us.

The Pennsylvania Rural Development Council is one of 36 state rural development councils nationwide.

Lancaster FFA Members Experience Good, Bad Characteristics Of Leaders At Conference

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Member-elected officers of Lancaster County FFA chapters took the day "off," so to speak, to learn important skills in leading any organization, instill friendship, build trust, and bring out the best in themselves here at the annual leadership conference.

On Wednesday, about 100 leaders of almost a dozen FFA chapters in the county attended the daylong conference hosted by the Cloister FFA at Ephrata High School.

Beth Frey, county president from Manor FFA, told the presidents and vice presidents during the afternoon workshop that members "look up to you, they follow you — that's what leadership is."

She told all members, at the beginning of the conference, "We challenge you to go home from the conference a better leader."

The conference hosted workshops that fine-tune the skills FFA'ers will need throughout life, according to Sam Hayes, state secretary of ag, at the conference.

As a member of the Warriors Mark FFA, Hayes recalled how important learning professional skills were. "To this day I still call up the skills set I learned in FFA," he told the FFA members.

He told FFA members to "avail yourself of the kaleidoscope of programs in FFA."

Hayes, a state House leader, told the FFA members that to be good professionals, you need to understand the "technical aspects of the profession." FFA members, history has noted, have proven themselves to be "some of our best citizens," he said.

Hayes spoke about his work trying to obtain international markets for Pennsylvania ag products, with the logo, "Products For the Planet." For FFA members, there are more job titles than ever before in the history of agriculture.

The state agriculture secretary noted how, in his travels here and abroad, Lancaster County agriculture and areas around Lancaster County are recognized worldwide.

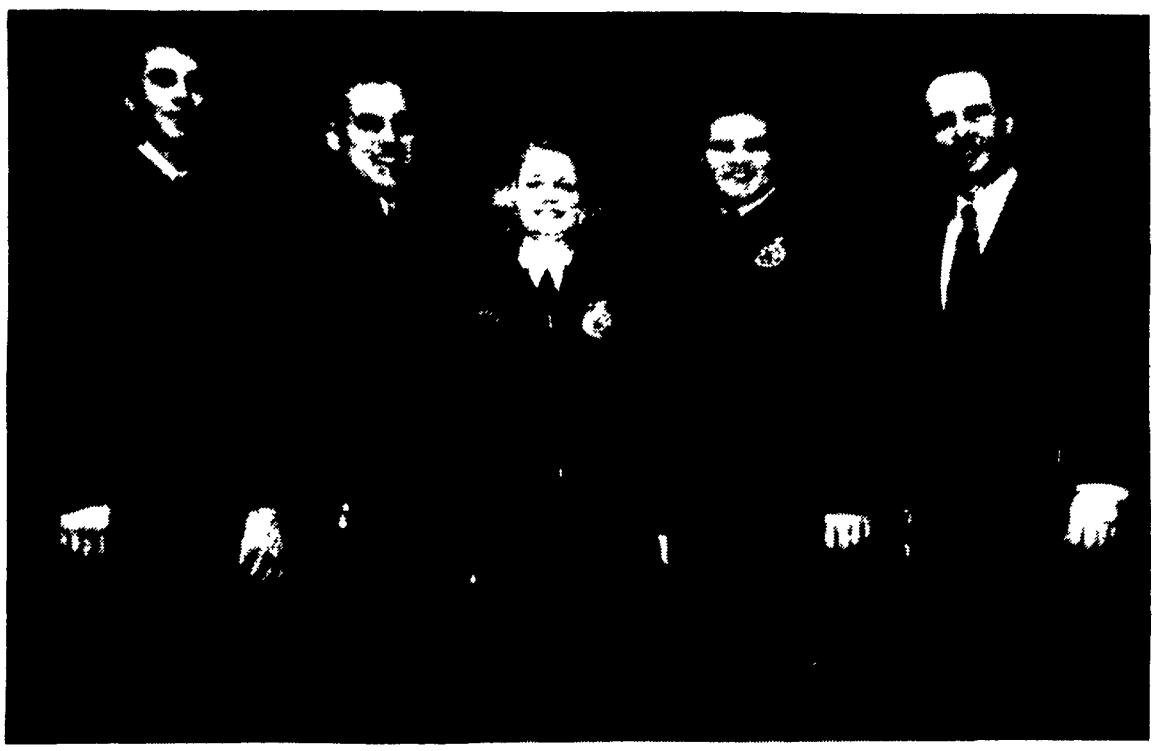
During a question and answer session, Hayes spoke about the very successful ag preservation program, which is preserving farms at "a rate greater than any other state," he said. Policy is being put in place to "double that rate," with aggressive new strategies.

As for international trade, despite Far East recession woes, Pennsylvania food products are still in demand, even in Japan.

And neighboring countries such as Mexico are markets which the state seeks out for Pennsylvania agriculture products.

He told FFA members that winning "away" games are just as important as the home games, and that, such as the events hosted by the leadership school, you have to "compete to get better."

During the workshop skills session with county presidents and vice presidents, Beth Frey, county president, and Brittany Robinson, state vice president, reviewed a "checks and balances" list for leaders. The list, compiled from commentary by county leaders, included the "good" and "bad" qualities of leaders.



As a member of the Warriors Mark FFA, Sam Hayes, state secretary of agriculture, far right, recalled how important learning professional skills were. "To this day I still call up the skills set I learned in FFA," he told the FFA members. State officers at the conference, from left, Dan Kreider, chaplain; Travis Donough, sentinel; Allyson Cole, reporter; and Brittany Robinson, vice president.

FFA members listed the ability to keep organize, set priorities, instill self-discipline, leading by example, being enthusiastic, learning to delegate, and handling stress as some of the good qualities.

"You will experience, as president, an awful lot of stress," Robinson told the county presidents and vice presidents.

Bad qualities including leading by dictatorship, being disorganized, not listening or communicating well, and trying to take on too much work.

The FFA handout included a quote by Dwight Eisenhower, former U.S. president: "A leader is one who has the ability to get people to do what you want them to do, but in a way they also want to do it."

Robinson noted the importance of a personal organizer/calendar to help build a strong organization. She urged them all to purchase one and use in their office. She also spoke about the importance of looking for outlets for stress.

She also spoke about delegating duties to those capable of doing them.

"You will experience extreme stress if you take it all upon yourself," she said. FFA leaders must work as a team and presidents need to be able to delegate.

Outside "ropes" competition, a staple of FFA leadership schools,

Sam Hayes, secretary of agriculture, told the FFA members that to be good professionals, you need to understand the "technical aspects of the profession." County officers, front row, from left, Beth Frey, county president and Amanda Overly, reporter. Second row, Andy Nolt, student adviser and Chuck Beam, chaplain. Third Row, Rueban Hartman, treasurer and Jim Mullen, sentinel. Back row, Dayna Weinhold, north vice president, and Hayes.

House Ag Committee Amends Dairy Compact Legislation

out of the House Ag Committee and received first consideration by the House and was tabled on Monday.

It takes three considerations for a bill to be approved by a legislative body.

It is expected that, when the House of Representatives returns to session in June, leadership will send the bill to Appropriations Committee, before reviewing again on second consideration.

While in the Appropriations Committee, little action is expected because the legislation requires no state fiscal note. However, committee leadership determines how quickly the bill is considered.

The House is then expected to consider the legislation, before sending it back to the Senate for reconsideration, because of the amendments.

Frequently what seems imminent in Harrisburg can be far different from what eventually comes to pass, but from comments made by a number of people involved with the issue, it does seem likely the legislation could well end up being settled between the two legislative bodies and sent to Gov. Tom Ridge for signing into law by the end of June.

If not, the state Legislature would have to wait until it returns in September, after Labor Day, to review the proposed law. It would also have to have the legislation signed into law by Gov. Ridge before the end of September, or before the federal Legislature decides to focus on the federal authorizing law.

For those unfamiliar with the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact, it is a six-state milk pricing organization authorized by the U.S. Constitution and created in the 1996 Farm Bill as a means to soften the transition for the dairy industry in the New England states from the scheduled elimination of federal support pricing for the dairy industry.

Simply, the Compact Commission — consisting of up to five delegates from each of the participating states, representing dairy producers, processors, and consumers — determines the minimum price farmers are to receive for their milk, and a retail price of drinking milk that can provide the additional funds to pay farmers.

The minimum price to farmers kicks in when drinking milk prices (the Boston Class I, as set by the federal government according to a formula that considers market values of milk products such as butter and cheese) falls below the Compact Commission-set level.

It creates a minimum milk price paid to farmers for their drinking milk, providing a potential for break-even to profitable cash-flow protection.

In Pennsylvania, Dairy Compact legislation was proposed during the previous Legislative session, but never made it for a vote before session ended last fall.

The current proposal is very similar to what had been proposed, and has been one of the first issues to be taken up by the current state Legislature.

The Senate version of Pennsylvania's Compact legislation was drafted by state Sen. Roger Madigan and is also supported by Sen. William Slocum, majority chairman of the Senate Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee.

Both senators represent northern tier counties with less dairy production than the southern counties, and reportedly higher rates of farm failure due to marginal producer prices, despite record high prices two out of the past three years.

What the Compact means to the dairy industry as a whole is uncertain. It has varied so far, depending upon the individual.

State Sens. Madigan and Slocum have stated that the Dairy Compact legislation represents a form of farmland preservation for their respective constituencies, which suffer from not being able to attract much, if any, farmland preservation funds.

However, other state legislators don't necessarily share the view that entering into the regional governmental pricing system of a Compact to possibly stem the loss of dairy farm land is justifiable.

According to Rep. Raymond Bunt Jr., R-Montgomery County, who is chairman of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, many members of the committee have concerns that, in the long run, joining the Compact may do more harm for small herd dairy farms, and perhaps hasten the industry's integration.

Rep. Bunt said that while the bill was approved by the committee, it was with much reservation.

Egolf's "no" vote reflected the same concerns, he said, and he expressed the sentiment that his vote was not much different than the others — he said he is in opposition to the Compact and in support of the family farmers in his district — and the vote didn't reflect opinion toward the three amendments.

"It's a pretty involved and complicated pact they want to get into," Egolf said about the Compact and those who are promoting it, "but basically I'm concerned about the small dairy farmers. In the short run (the Compact) will help the small dairy farmers, but in long run it will hurt them.

"The large farmers it will help, but it will hurt the small farmers," he said, adding, "There are lots of aspects that I really question.

"It isn't the right way to go, so I felt I should vote that way," Egolf said.

Effectively, the three amendments were:

- To create a June 30, 2002, sunset provision for the law (or three years from the effective date of the law), so that Pennsylvania's eligibility in a Compact would end then;
- To restore the Pennsylvania delegation to the Compact Commission to the maximum five people allowed under Compact law. As background, when S.B. 365 was in the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee it was amended from having five appointees by the governor represent the state on the Northeast Dairy Compact Commission to having the three members of the Pa. Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) represent the state on the Commission. The House amendment restores the delegation to five members, retaining one member of the PMMB, its chairman, but adding the majority and minority chairpeople (or their designees) of the Senate and House agriculture committees.
- Add wording to emphasize that Pennsylvania's Compact delegation members will "take all reasonable steps necessary to minimize the economic and administra-

New Jersey Ag Leaders Visit Chile

SALEM COUNTY, N.J. — Twenty-three participants of the New Jersey Agricultural Leadership Development Program (NJALDP) traveled to Chile recently as part of the program.

One of the participants was Rob Ferber, farm market manager of Linvilla Orchards in Media, Pennsylvania, who also serves as president of the Pennsylvania Retail Farm Market Association.

Ferber lives in Salem County New Jersey and he and friend Joe Vanderwerken, a field agent for Seabrook Brothers and Sons, a frozen vegetable processing company in Seabrook, N.J., are scheduled to be graduated from the NJALDP on July 1.

The NJALDP is a two-year leadership development program sponsored by the New Jersey Department of Agriculture, Rutgers University, the New Jersey Agricultural Society, and the new Jersey Farm Bureau.

The program is designed to develop informed and articulate spokespersons for New Jersey agriculture. A 12-day trip to Chile was part of that program.

Ferber recently reported on his experience in Chile, to share in his words and photographs some of the highlights of the agricultural endeavors there, so that agriculturalists and marketers here can better understand the actual competitive nature of the global marketplace.

Chile is like an island, geographically isolated from the rest of the world by the Atacama Desert to the north, the Andres Mountains to the east, the Pacific Ocean to the west, and polar ice caps to the south.

Because of this, agricultural pest and disease problems are minimal.

The climate, much like California, is dry, but there is ample water supply for irrigation from the snowmelt off the Andes Mountains, making growing conditions ideal.

Comparing our regional agricultural economy with Chile's economy — the most stable in Latin America — Chile, like us (in the Eastern United States), cannot compete (globally) in major commodities, such as corn, wheat and soybeans.

In order to compete in the world market, Chile has discovered and developed niche markets all over the world for many specialized products.

The country is focused on export agriculture. It is an economic engine.

The Chilean people don't consume much of their own first grade produce — if it's good enough to export, it goes on the boat.

The advent of the global market has been creating prosperity for some in agriculture, and for others it is resulting in depressed markets. The Chilean agricultural sector is no different. Some producers are doing well, others are suffering.

Open trade and the global economy are contributing to a prosperous and expanding fruit industry in central Chile.

In southern Chile open trade has flooded the market, driving down beef and dairy prices with devastating consequences.

Although there is a lack of developed domestic infrastructure (roadways, etc.) in much of Chile, it's agricultural infrastructure is very advanced.

Valparaiso, the major port we visited, is a frenzied beehive of activity. The trucks roll in like clockwork.

The ship we visited costs $15,000 per day to lease, with its crew.

It holds more than 6,000 skids of fruit in 16 controlled-atmosphere chambers in the hull. Each skid is bar-coded with the identity of the crop and grower, its origin and date.

On the deck of the ship there were 59 additional containers that can be refrigerated and were to be carrying fruit, garlic and seed.

Chilean fruit exporters take such good care of their cargo that any gaps in the load are filled in with air bags.

It takes the ship 11 days to take a cargo load from the port at Valparaiso to Philadelphia. It takes the

The development of vaccines prove a challenge, even for some of the less challenging, more commonly known, less changeable form of poultry diseases such as pullorum and Newcastle.

Some vaccines, Donahoe said, can be made out of bacteria or viruses. For vaccines made from viruses, the key to making them work is to create antibodies which coat the virus, to prevent it from dividing, and rendering it harmless to the bird by preventing it from replicating. The virus is transferred through the air and enters the bird's upper respiratory passage. There, the virus can be taken into the body by swallowing, which spreads through the reproductive and gastrointestinal system.

Eventually, the virus can escape into the bloodstream, known as "viremia," said Donahoe. The virus goes into the liver and spleen, and this is when the bird can show early signs of disease — it goes off feed, it doesn't drink the water, and it becomes "quieter," Donahoe said.

When viremia occurs, the bird mounts a large immune response. At this time, clinical signs develop, including swelling eye tissues, the bird is off feed, egg production down, and there are any number of "economic parameters" that show the producer the bird is infected, he noted.

A live virus vaccination allows the bird to develop the large immune response quickly, though the virus can't replicate.

But the response is a shorter period of time (only eight weeks, if dealing with influenza) compared to 25 weeks for the killed vaccine. The killed vaccines use water-in-oil emulsions along with the chemically killed, inactive virus. The killed vaccine continues to generate a very high immune response in the bird, Donahoe noted.

Donahoe reviewed the early history of developing vaccines, which began in southeastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey in the late 1800s. In 1971, one groundbreaking event occurred — the first license against cancer, for Marek's Disease, was obtained. An IBD vaccine was obtained in 1980, and new companies and new products have continue to proliferate in the decades since.

Now, the industry has to deal with mergers and acquisitions on almost a weekly basis, with technology being traded and transferred. And companies are developing vaccines in a wide variety of ways. The use of biologicals, now at 15 percent of the share, are growing. "Biologics are on the rise," said Donahoe.

Possibilities for future vaccines were discussed Monday by Dr. John P. Donahoe, president of Maine Biological Laboratories, Waterville, Maine, left. Donahoe spoke to about 30 poultry producers and agri-industry representatives at the Poultry Health and Management Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant near Manheim. At right is John Schwartz, Lancaster County extension director.

In the past, 11 companies were making vaccines. Now it's down to eight. Some are "casualties" of mergers, and they will continue, Donahoe said. "There are rumors about every one of them right now."

Donahoe outlined several major developments in the forefront of vaccination development:

• Recombinant DNA vaccines. The technology focuses in on what genes are "bad" in live viruses and takes them out. This includes engineering the genes to add antigens to more formidably tackle Newcastle and bronchitis. "Other recombinant vaccines are coming," he said.

• Competitive exclusion for biologicals. Using other, less threatening bacteria can block the attachments of salmonella and more threatening bacteria. Duration and delivery of the bacteria is a problem today, a "goal for researchers to improve on," Donahoe said.

• Vaccines that can address the food safety issues that are consuming the industry, in light of salmonella and e. coli outbreaks. A lot more work needs to be done on producing live and killed salmonella vaccines. But early research has not been good for campylobacter control, noted Donahoe.

• In ovo vaccines, which involve highly sophisticated equipment. Vaccines for Malik's and IBD could be licensed in ovo, and many more are under development.

• DNA vaccines. Instead of shooting the entire virus into the bird, take the gene for the antigen and inoculate the bird. The gene could be carefully coated for and correctly implanted in the bird, with no risk of developing the disease or fear of endotixins. "But this technology is a long way off," he said. "It's science fiction today."

Many immunosuppressive diseases — which cause the bird's natural immunities to be jeopardized — includes bursal, Marek's, chicken anemia, leukosis, and others. The immunosuppression is permanent — which makes other pathogens a lot worse to the bird.

• Retroviruses and others, including J leukosis, where eradication is needed. Vaccines will be difficult to develop because of the changeability of the virus. "Don't look for it anytime soon," Donahoe said.

• Protozoan vaccines. Vaccines for coccidiosis and other diseases are becoming important because the standard drugs are disappearing from use. Availability will be determined on economic viability, including safety, cross-protection, and low cost to develop and use.

• Antibody therapy. The idea "once held great promise," said Donahoe. But how to administer them and not cause allergic reactions? There could be a way to blend the treatment with other health measures for the bird, including feed.

• Adjuvants and immune modulation. Researchers are looking for a way to generate a fast, long-lasting immune response with a reasonable antigen load.

• Cross-protection, developing vaccines that can handle so many different strains of infection, such as bronchitis, coccidiosis, influenza, bursal disease, and others. Researchers must find a way to develop a cross-protective antigen. All the labs are working on it, he noted.

• Vaccines for emerging diseases. Exotic diseases and diseases never present before in poultry will develop over time and companies must be prepared.

• Mucosal immunity. Finding ways to line the gut and reproductive tract with strong mucosal immunity, a good local cell-mediated immunity, will take more research. The use of antibodies in the digestive tract can be useful to controlling harmful bacteria, but the material must be present on a constant basis. Work to apply human research in this area can help.

• Gene insertion. Take the gene dominant for Newcastle, for instance, and put it in chicken's genes. This gene insertion technique "sounds good in theory," said Donahoe, but there are problems. It must be near some type of "regulator" that can allow the gene to be "turned off and turned on later," he said. The gene must be turned on when the chick can handle it correctly.

"This is big-time science fiction," he said. "We're a long way from it, but we're working on it."

In the U.S., food safety is a high priority because of life- threatening outbreaks of diseases such as salmonella. But in other countries, salmonella has little if no priority, because it doesn't cause problems with the chickens themselves.

Chilean growers have the same challenges as United States growers when it comes to exporting to the European Union.

Major foreign investments and governmental support — from the national to local level — have contributed to the growth of a thriving export-based economy in Chile. It's government works hard to cultivate markets abroad.

Additionally, Chilean export agriculture receives support from private and governmental organizations that specialize in supporting the agricultural and export industries.

For example, there is Foundation Chile, a private, non-profit organization dedicated to identifying new ag-related industries with commercial potential in Chile.

The foundation benefits agriculture by starting experimental projects and then selling them once they have proved their potential.

The foundation's track record has been so good that recently, when it began to experiment with the introduction of cranberries, private industry followed suit without waiting to see if the experiment would actually work.

There is also ProChile — the Chilean Trade Commission within its Ministry of Foreign Affairs, with 35 commercial offices worldwide. ProChile's role is to support and advance Chilean business interests in the global marketplace by assisting in the development of the export process, establishing international business relationships, and attracting foreign investments.

While in Chile, we visited Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc.

Pioneer develops, produces, and sells seed genetics. In addition to corn, Pioneer sells soybean, alfalfa, canola, and wheat varieties, as well as sorghum, canola and sunflower hybrids.

Pioneer's Chilean operations specialize in hybrid corn production. There they have 150 contract growers farm a total of 8,000 hectares (1 hectare equals about 2.5 acres). Pioneer requires that its contract growers must have a pneumatic planter.

The Chilean people have an ideal climate, low-cost production, plentiful labor, and world-class agricultural expertise.

Major investments have been made in human resources. There are 10 universities with agriculture programs, each of which graduates an average of 200 students per year.

We met many people with agricultural degrees.

The people of Chile were friendly, interesting, and hospitable.

The cultural exchange provided us with a valuable understanding of how important Chile's role ir our world have become, and how small the world really is.

Forest Products, Equipment, Technology Expo May 21-22

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A 1999 Forest Products, Equipment and Technology Exposition is set to be held May 21-22 at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

As the name of the exposition implies, more than 75 exhibitors from throughout North America are set to display and demonstrate the latest and most advanced technology, equipment and products related to the forsest products industry.

The short name for the expo is "Timber '99."

Sponsored by the Hardwood Lumber Manufacturers Association, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and the Pennsylvania Hardwoods Development Council, the event marks the first time it is to be held at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex, in the Northwest Hall.

It is appropriate for Pennsylvania to be serving as host site for the exposition, held every two years, according to state Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes Jr.

"Gov. Tom Ridge and I would like to see this showcase of Pennsylvania's timber resources become a national leader in the industry's schedule of expositions," Secretary Hayes said.

"When you have a great timber industry, as we have in Pennsylvania, it is only natural that we should have a leading expo."

Pennsylvania has more than 17 million acres of forestland, with almost 90,000 people employed in the forest products industry, making it the state's seventh largest industry.

Additionally, Pennsylvania has the largest hardwood reserve in the nation.

The exposition is designed to provide an opportunity for woodlot owners to meet with representatives of private forestry organizations, wood industry professionals and public agencies — all of whom are prepared to help farmers who want to maximize the economic value of their wood resources.

"Information from these groups and persons can help farmers to recognize the financial potential of their wood lots, while providing education about the importance of future sustainability of Pennsylvania's forest resources," Hayes said.

The expo is to run from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., Friday, May 21, and from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, May 22.

Among the events scheduled include an opening log sawing ceremony set for 11 a.m., May 21; indoor and outdoor displays, and "Wood Magic," a show geared toward young students to demonstrate the importance of wood products to everyday activities.

The admission fee of $5 per adult, while there is no fee for children aged less than 16 years old.

The log-sawing ceremony is to feature log sawing by Carroll Kline, named outstanding logger of the year; a special visit from Smokey Bear; remarks from state Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr.; remarks from state Secretary of the Department of Conservation and Natural Resources John Oliver; remarks from state Secretary of the Department of Environmental Protection James Seif; remarks by Ron Andrews, chairman of the board of directors for the Hardwood Lumber Manufacturers Association of Pennsylvania. Rick Rufo, of Glen Rock, with O'Shea Lumber, is to serve as master of ceremonies.

On both days, the Wood Magic Science Fair is to make demonstrations at 9 a.m., 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The Wood Magic Science Fair is a mobile, interactive wood products laboratory.

Wood carving demonstrations are to be conducted by the Boot Jack Mountain wood carvers, who are twin brothers Randy and Rick Boni of Ridgeway (Elk County).

F.O.4 Administrator Announces Reform Informational Meetings

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — A series of meetings designed to inform farmers in the Mid-Atlantic region about the recently announced federal milk marketing order reforms began this week in Woodstown, New Jersey and are to be held through June, according to an announcement from David Walker, acting market administrator of the Middle Atlantic Marketing Area Federal Order No.4.

According to a brief message in the announcement, "Representatives from the market administrator's office will present information and answer questions on the new Northeast Order."

The meetings are open to all producers.

The final order reduces the number of federal orders nationally, sets up a new formula for determining milk values and pricing, and changes some other aspects of the program. The order has been somewhat controversial.

The first meeting was held Thursday, May 13 in Woodstown.

The rest of the schedule follows.

- May 27, 7 p.m., at the Walkersville Town Hall, located at 21 West Frederick Street, in Walkserville, Maryland.
- June 3, 7 p.m., at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center, in Lancaster.
- June 7, 7 p.m., at the Arey Assembly Hall, located at 201 Green Street, in Bridgewater, Virginia.
- June 9, 7 p.m., at the Rescue Hose Company Special Events Center, located at 407 South Washington Street, in Greencastle.
- June 10, 7 p.m., at the Berks County Agricultural Center, located at 1238 County Welfare Road, in Leesport.
- June 30, 7:30 p.m., at the Arena Restaurant, located on Rt. 220 at Pa. Turnpike Exit 11, in Bedford.

10th Ag Horizons Conference Set

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Changing Face of Agriculture is the focus of the 10th Ag Horizons Conference at The Wildwood Conference Center of the Harrisburg Area Community College Tuesday, Aug. 3.

This year's program is designed to help ag educators understand the various transitions taking place in today's agriculture and the related complexities. A group of successful and diverse industry representatives will be on hand to interact with the audience of educators.

George J. Conneman, professor of agricultural resource, and managerial economics at Cornell University, will set the stage for the program with his views of the many components and influences causing the changes occurring within agriculture.

A panel of representatives from various industries will discuss how they have put change to work for their operations. Slated for the panel are Scott Davenport, Heifer Division of Agway; Jerry Hostetter, swine management; Reid McCarthy, greenhouses; and Richard Waybright dairy.

The Wildwood Conference Center of the Harrisburg Area Community College will be the setting for the conference. The conference series is sponsored by The Southeast Regional Council of Cooperatives in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives (PCC) and Penn State University along with cooperatives serving agriculture in Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Delaware. Graduate credit at Penn State can be earned in conjunction with this conference.

The program will begin with a continental breakfast at 8:30 a.m. includes lunch, and is anticipated to conclude at 3:30 p.m. There is no charge to qualifying educators-instructors of vocational agriculture, business, and science, and cooperative extension agents. Educators who need more information should call Carol Duncan, (610) 693-5601.

Many Issues Surround Northeast Dairy Compact For Pennsylvania

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The 1996 Farm Bill directed that the 60-years of federal government price support programs for United States agricultural producers be ended, as a means to open up fair global trade.

With the fall of the former Soviet Union and the Communist Party in most of the world, long time trade obstacles — mostly protectionistic policies — created unfair and problematic difficulties to free global trade, especially for the United States agricultural industry seeking to export.

For the United States and trading partner nations, free and open global trade has been seen as a catalyst to improved economic conditions and improved individual human conditions.

Agricultural production protections, specifically those in which a nation's government subsidizes producer incomes and artificially lowers world commodity prices through export subsidies, had been a major block in settling the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

The World Trade Organization resulted from years of GATT discussions, and serves as an arbitration agency for member nations in international trade disputes.

The 1996 Farm Bill's provisions to eliminate federal government subsidization of producer incomes for agricultural commodities was a major concession made in order to encourage other nations to follow suit, as well as to reduce federal spending that was contributing to a growing national debt.

Export subsidization, which can allow selling commodities in the world market at below cost, requires transferring wealth from other businesses to artificially support another business.

The long-term outlook for such practices is that unless actual market forces are allowed to discover the value of commodities, real growth and competitiveness would be forever stymied, and the United States' agricultural industry, and others, would never be allowed to realize the full benefits from commodity production efficiencies and modernizations.

In other words, such artificial price manipulations would continue to prove to be a sinkhole for tax dollars and add to national debt, as well as serve to maintain a removed, slowly responding bureaucratic overlord to dairy farmers.

The Northeast Dairy Compact is somewhat different than a national farmer-price support program, in that federal tax revenues are not used to subsidize farmers, but rather consumers are required to pay slightly higher retail prices for their drinking milk.

While it could be argued that the additional retail cost consumers pay to support dairy farmer incomes is a form of a sales tax, and thus taxpayers are still footing the bill, the Northeast Dairy Compact was originally approved for the New England states on the explanation that dairy farms were essential there to its picturesque landscape, the landscape is essential to tourism, and tourism is a mainstay of the economic boat for the New England states.

Simply, the Compact Commission — consisting of delegates from each of the participating states representing dairy producers, processors, and consumers — determines the minimum price farmers are to receive for their milk, and a retail price of drinking milk that can provide the additional funds to pay farmers.

The minimum kicks in when drinking milk prices (as set by the federal government according to a formula that considers market values of milk products such as butter and cheese) falls below the Compact Commission-set level.

While the New England states only produce about 3 percent of the nation's milk supply and depend upon milk shipments from the nationally leading milk production states of New York and Pennsylvania, efforts have been underway to expand the borders of the Compact to include those Mid-Atlantic states and several others into the Northeast Compact.

There are also efforts to create a Southern Compact and a Northwest Compact.

Last year, the Northeast Dairy Compact Commission added regulations to control the amount of milk that can be shipped to Compact receiving plants and then be shipped back out of the region. When milk is received at a Compact plant it qualifies for Compact pricing.

According to Kenneth Becker, executive director of the Compact Commission, an excessive amount of milk was being shipped in, qualifying for the Compact price, and then being shipped out again.

More recently, the Commission began the process of reviewing a proposal to create supply management regulations to provide incentives for dairy farmers within the Compact to maintain or decrease production.

That issue is set to be discussed and considered by the Compact Commission during its June meeting.

In the meantime, the federal law

tive burdens imporved by the compact on" schools and the participants in the Federal Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children (commonly referred to as the "WIC Program").

According to Rep. Bunt, with regard to the first amendment, "We thought, perhaps we ought to have as broad as representation on the compact as possible and have the delgation constructed so that the people's voices be heard, rather than having the appointments be made withouth any input from the farming community."

Under both previous plans, the governor would have the authority to appoint delegates to the Compact Commission, which only requires consent by the state Senate.

Under the House version, Bunt argued that dairy farmers would have a much better chance to be involved in and influence the positions of a Compact delegation.

With both political party chairs of the respective state agriculture committees as Compact delegation members, it can be argued that dairy farmers are more likely to get a bipartisan, agriculturally sensitive, and issue-aware delegation that could give dairy farmers more influence, because of a closer relationship between voters and local elected representatives.

It is also argued that consistency would be greater because despite some turnover in staff to state Legislature's standing committees from time to time, generally there is a greater chance for continuity of knowledge about agricultural issues and historical developments.

"It brings things a little closer to home," Bunt said, in comparing the proposed structure of the Compact delegation. "I would like to see a stronger presence (on a Compact delegation) of members how are working with agriculture on a day-in, day-out basis."

As far as the amendment to include a sunset provision, Bunt said it gives Pennsylvania farmers an opportunity to get out if Pennsylvania joins and things start going badly.

"We did a sunset amendment because we wanted to make sure there is an exit provision, in case we see that this is going to add fuel to the demise of the small dairy farmer," Bunt said, "and that is a primary concern of the members of the Ag Committee in the House.

"We see (the Northeast Dairy Compact) granting short term relief to small dairy farmers, but we are concerned about the long term impacts."

He said there appears to be a growing consensus that the Compact, with its supply management abilities and other authorities that can supercede state authority, could set up a situation whereby indepedent dairy producers, especially small family farms, could be minimized, if not sacrificed, in the name of production controls designed to stabilize prices.

Production controls could well build a strong foundation for stabilized production, which is being interpreted as meaning "integrated" or "contract" dairy production industry.

There are other concerns as well, especially in trying to understand why the state's major farm organizations have recently changed policy with regard to production controls, when they have historically expressed strong opposition to government controlling individual opportunities to compete.

"It passed with very reluctant support," Rep. Bunt said. "And we do consider the House to be closer to the people, because of the smaller constituencies.

"Frankly, we have always been a friend of the dairy farmers," Bunt said, "and even thought we went to them with our concerns and reservations, they weren't greeted well, because of the short-term benefits. But keeping in mind the support (from the farmers and farm organizations), we relunctantly agreed to go along with it.

"I hope to God I'm wrong," Bunt said about the negative long-term outlook for small dairy farmers under an expanded Compact. "But I would be remiss if I said I didn't have these reservations."

Many Issues Surround Northeast Dairy Compact For Pennsylvania

authorizing the existing Dairy Compact provides for possible expansion, should certain adjoining states' legislatures create specific authorizing laws.

Pennsylvania remains the holdout among those additional states to create such Compact eligibility laws. However, it appears likely that the state Legislature will do so, even if relunctantly, if the dairy farming community and the farm policy organizations continue to request it.

New York State did so when Compact authorizing law was attatched at the last minute to legislation that provided salary increases for the state's legislators.

The original Compact legislation was reported to have been added to the 1996 Farm Bill through political negotiation — as a trade-off for votes for other legislation relating to a United States' senator's bid in the presidential election and related federal campaign funding. That report has never been refuted.

Numerous reports from lobbyists and federal lawmakers indithis week were projected to continue to be low.

However, farmer advocacy organizations and national dairy cooperatives have been urging for the passage of Compact-eligibility laws for Pennsylvania and the other states, and also for the federal Legislature to reauthorize and expand the Northeast Dairy Compact, as well as create the other regional Compacts in the United States.

The co-ops and organizations claim that expanding the Compact would bring "price stability" to Northeast dairy producers.

It seems that despite the strength of annualized average dairy prices, the volatility of the monthly dairy price under market conditions is the reason dairy farmers are going out of business.

In other words, while the income for the year may be greater than it has been, the variability of monthly cash flow at the farm — from high profit to high loss — is hurting dairy farmers because they must pay most bills monthly, not annually, and their businesses are mostly not designed to save extreme increases in cash flow to use during periods of extreme decreases in cash flow.

Furthermore, the modern United States dairy industry economic system has developed in an environment of a federal milk marketing order pricing system that continues to set values for milk, milk components and dairy products, rather than allowing the industry to discover its own values and demand for milk.

The transition away from government producer price supports, as well as competitive pressures to increase productivity, have resulted in a rapid pace of mergers and consolidation in all sectors of agriculture, including, and to some extent especially, the dairy industry.

Also adding to the confusion is the fact that the USDA continues to determine the value of milk, and has recently announced a final order changing the structure and cate that reauthorization of the Compact law is not popular in Washington, even though legislation has been introduced.

In recent months, however, Pennsylvania's U.S. Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Philadelphia, held a press conference to announce his support for expanding the Compact.

Up until then, the consensus of sentiment that seemed to be expressed by the Pennsylvania delegation to Washington was that the federal government's role in controlling the price of farm commodities — either through national supply management or through various production control programs — was over.

Since then, however, farm commodity prices dropped across the board, apparently in response to devalued currencies of global trading partners, surplus production, and the failure of intended export markets. According to published reports and testimony presented at hearings regarding low commodity prices, product intended for export instead has been marketed domestically, adding to, or creating, surplus and lower producer prices.

The domestic dairy industry had been the exception, with record high prices received by producers for much of 1998 and extending briefly into 1999.

In February, the market price for dairy commodities dropped significantly and resulted in a dramatically lower Basic Formula Price (farmer prices respond with a two-month delay after the BFP level moves up or down) that resulted in an unexpected, signficant decrease in milk value.

Especially since then, political lobbying efforts have strengthened considerably to promote passage of Compact legislation.

The issue is controversial and somewhat confusing.

Agricultural economists have forcast that 1999 dairy prices should represent the third highest average price ever. At the same time, feed prices have been lower than they have been for years, and mechanisms by which it assigns milk values.

Dairy and other farmer political organizations have already begun lobbying the U.S. Legislature to create a law changing the final order.

National Pork Producers Launches Environmental Assessment Program

Bob Mikesell
Senior Extension Associate

Responding to global economic forces, swine farms are becoming fewer in number and larger in size. People who live near these operations are concerned, understandably, about a large operation's odor and its potential effect on water quality.

The National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) has initiated several programs to alleviate public concerns about both water pollution and odor from large swine farms. One effort is the Environmental Assurance Program to educate producers about their potential to pollute and introduce best management practices to avoid pollution.

When correctly stored and applied to cropland, nutrients contained in liquid manure can improve soil fertility without affecting ground water. However, if stored in unsafe structures or applied incorrectly, liquid manure can potentially pollute waterways.

A second program of the NPPC is the Odor Solutions Initiative to identify potential long-term solutions to odor problems. Odor can arise from manure application, manure storage, and the pig barns themselves. Odors from all three sources can be reduced through good management and sanitation.

The NPPC has spent $1.5 million in check-off funds to develop the National Pork Producers Council's On-Farm Odor and Environmental Assessment Program (OFO/EAP) This educational program uses a team of two trained assessors to physically evaluate swine operations. One assessor is from a publicly funded institution such as the Cooperative Extension Service or the Soil Conservation Service. The other assessor is a private individual.

During an assessment, the two assessors visit the farm and evaluate management practices in five areas of the operation:

1) General site. Is the farm clean, well kept, and visually pleasing? Where are neighbors in relation to the farm and manure application areas?

2) Buildings. Are technologies and management practices in place to keep odor generation to a minimum? Are the pigs comfortable and healthy as a result of good ventilation, sanitation, and management?

3) Manure Storage Structures. Are structures properly constructed and free of leaks and structural damage? Are structures secured and safe?

4) Manure Land Application. Is manure applied at reasonable times and rates or in accordance with a nutrient management plan? Is manure application equipment well-maintained? Are manure application records kept?

5) Mortality Management. Are dead animals secured and disposed of in a timely and environmentally responsible manner?

After the assessment and before leaving the farm, the team discusses their findings with the producer. During the exit interview, the assessors place special emphasis on practices that are unsafe or could potentially threaten ground water. Assessment findings are written in a final report, signed by both assessors and forwarded to the producer. All the data collected during the assessment are entered into a national database kept by NPPC. This database may eventually yield information that will allow producers to further reduce odor.

Recently the NPPC signed a voluntary Compliance Audit Program (CAP) agreement with Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). Under this agreement, producers who undergo an OFO/EAP assessment and choose to participate in the CAP program receive a reduction of fines for any nutrient management violations uncovered Producers who have no violations or take corrective action receive a seal issued by NPPC and EPA indicating their successful completion of the assessment. To further strengthen their support of this program, EPA has released $5 million to pay for assessments.

By the end of 2001, National Pork Producers Council has set a goal of assessing farms that raise 80 percent of pigs nationally. Pennsylvania's goal is to assess 60 farms in 1999 As of April 1 this year, twenty one farms in Pennsylvania have requested an OFO/EAP audit. Pennsylvania pork producers are encouraged to have their farms assessed and to participate in the CAP program.

Ag Secretary Calls State Budget Solid Foundation

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. this week said that the 1999-2000 state budget signed into law by Gov. Tom Ridge and passed by members of the General Assembly "provides a solid foundation for Pennsylvania agriculture.

"From making substantial investments that preserve our precious farmland to providing additional food assistance funding for the needy, this new budget says that agriculture is essential to the future of Pennsylvania," Hayes said.

A major component of the new $19.1 billion budget is $43 million ot accelerate the purchase of easements under Pennsylvania's Farmland Preservation Program, administered by the Agriculture Department.

"This funding will nearly double our farmland-preservation effort by helping to address a growing backlog of prime farms and protect them from the threat of sprawl," said Hayes, who noted that Pennsylvania currently is preserving farmland at a faster rate than any state in the nation.

The budget also includes funding for Gov. Ridge's "Growing Greener" initiative, which requires implementing legislation now being considered.

"Growing Greener" would dramatically restructure $1.3 billion in environmental funding over the next five years, redirecting money to priority programs such as protecting watersheds, preserving open space, investing in parks and environmental recreation, reclaiming abandoned mines and wells, and reorienting other programs to encourage sound land-use practices and to discourage sprawl.

Other key agriculture components in the new budget are:

- $14.46 million for the State Food Purchase Program, for counties to purchase and distribute food to needy Pennsylvanians;
- $4.1 million to help county fairs and $446,000 to help the 4-H, FFA and agricultural expositions, such as the All-American Dairy Show and the Keystone International Livestock Exposition;
- $3.75 million for the Animal Health Commission. The Commission coordinates funding for animal health and diagnostic activities;
- $3.28 million to continue the Nutrient Management Fund, which helps farmers to maintain environmentally sound operations;
- An additional $1 million for the Agriculture Department to further help Conservation Districts in their work to aid agriculture;
- $3.25 million for agricultural research to help keep Pennsylvania farmers and agri-businesses viable;
- $1.054 million to promote the sale of agriculture products in the domestic and international marketplace.
- $726,000 in state matching funds for agricultural product promotion and marketing activities;
- $710,000 for research and promotional activities for Pennsylvania's hardwoods industry.
- $175,000 for animal health initiatives, including $100,000 to manage animal health emergencies, and $75,000 to combat Johne's Disease;
- $100,000 to purchase a new bulk tank calibration unit, and $50,000 to create a database for the Agriculture Department's weights and measures program.
- $100,000 for new laboratory equipment to perform plant and seed sample analysis, and help to protect Pennsylvania plants and crops from disease and pests.

QUESTION: We are debating the need for a prefresh diet for our heifers. What are some indicators that would tell us if this management change would be beneficial?

ANSWER: When this question came in, I took the liberty of looking at this herd's Pa.DHIA records before I gave an answer.

I always recommended a transition or prefresh diet for all animals before their next calving. I believe this to be especially helpful to heifers that calve for the first time because of the many changes that occur this time.

What are some statistical indicators that help us come to these conclusion?

One place to evaluate heifer performance, and determine how well prepared they are to become cows, is found on the third section down on Pa.DHIA Herd Summary II.

Here we see the "Profile of Cows by Lactation Number" heading.

Near the center of the page is a column that states the average days to peak, and the average milk at peak.

In this particular herd, we see a large contrast between older cows and first lactation heifers as we compare days to peak.

The second lactation cows reach their peak at 80 days and older cows at 60 days. In contrast, we see that first lactation heifers take 130 days to reach their peak.

It is normal for heifers to peak slower than their older counterparts, but certainly not this slowly.

After the first lactation, cows should peak in milk production two to three weeks ahead of reaching peak dry matter intake.

We recognize the need for proper body reserves and with this bit of knowledge the transition diets can help reduce the weight loss that is seen as cows reach their peak around 60 days in milk.

Heifers, obviously going through more changes at this time, usually hit peak milk a bit later, at 75 to 85 days in milk. The heifers that are peaking much later are telling us we have not prepared them to be productive milk cows.

Another evaluation that tells us if we are meeting the needs of these changing animals is to look at some reproductive performance parameters and see how they differ from one age group to another.

Again, we look at our Pa.DHIA Herd Summary II for this information.

The second section down is the "Reproductive Profile of Breeding Herd." Going right to left, we come across the column labeled, "Average Days to 1st Service."

This herd again shows great disparity between first-lactation and older cows.

Performance differs little between the second lactation and older cows with the average days to first service at 110 days.

When we look to the first lactation animals, we see a substantial difference. Noting that the performance of of the older cows could be improved, reproductively, the first lactation animals show a more severe problem. Here we see these cows being bred back for the first time at over 160 days. First lactation cows make up 45 percent of the herd. Therefore, it is no wonder that overall herd reproductive peformance is not as good as we would like it to be.

These two evaluations do not exclusively point to problems cause by the lack of a transition period.

Bunk management and grouping needs can be indicated when first lactation performance lags behind the rest of the herd. The numbers for this herd suggest that the lack of a prefresh period might create problems as new animals come into the herd.

Getting them off to a good start by proper preparation should be your first step.

Pa.DHIA offers a consultation service to address these types of concerns. For those of you who are testing for MUN, you have the opportunity for a free farm visit that will help in record evaluation. Remember, your cows evaluate what you do, and also what you do not do.

2nd Ag Research Symposium Set For June 8

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. recently announced that the second Agriculture Research Symposium will be Tuesday, June 8, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., in Room 60E, Capitol East Wing.

"Offering workable solutions to keep Pennsylvania farmers and agri-businesses viable is the purpose of agricultural research," Hayes said.

To remain competitive, agriculture must find effective responses to the emerging demands of the 21st century. Agriculture research is absolutely necessary to keep Pennsylvania agriculture out front as a leader in the nation and the world. Agriculture research has received the strong support of Gov. Tom Ridge and the General Assembly."

Initiated by the Ridge Administration in 1998, the Agriculture Research Symposium highlights some of the work conducted on a broad range of issues at agricultural research institutions in the commonwealth, including Pennsylvania State University; University of Pennsylvania; Delaware Valley College; Monell Chemical Senses Center; Dickinson School of Law; and St. Joseph's University.

Among topics to be addressed in this year's Agriculture Research Symposium are: abatement of agricultural odors; animal health issues, such as BVD and Johne's Disease; conflict resolution; the economic impact of Pennsylvania agriculture; food-safety issues, such as E. coli and salmonella; international markets; pesticide reduction; vegetable production; and use of agricultural and food processor waste.

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Mere 'Science Fiction'

In the U.S., a live salmonella d. vaccine licensed for broilers was successfully tested. One was good — "it looks too good," he said, with no evidence of salmonella present at the end of the kill line. "I'd like to see more (evidence)."

For leukosis, producers might see a genetically engineered vaccine available soon. The disease is like HIV in humans — it can change its composition and shake off a typical immune response. If effective, the vaccine will be effective for only a short period of time, noted Donahoe.

The key may be simply to eradicate the disease. Already we're losing genetic potential simply to fight the disease. Also, modulating the immune response directly lowers feed conversion.

Giving killed vaccines effects the conversions — so economic considerations must be provided to their use.

As of now, a vaccine for campylobacter remains frustratingly elusive, according to Donahoe. "We don't have a handle on it yet," he said, though work continues.

Dunlap Closes

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The largest livestock broker here at the Lancaster Stockyards is closing its doors Monday for good.

Walter M. Dunlap and Sons Inc. will close its business after 101 years of operation, according to Connie Dunlap Santarelli, the company's president, long-time Lancaster Stockyard board member, and granddaughter of the founder.

The announcement came this week.

Santarelli, contacted by phone Thursday, decided to close the business because of personal health reasons and a long commute from her home in Alexandria, Va.

As to running the business, "I really loved it," she told Lancaster Farming. She said she became very interested in running the company after her father, James C. Dunlap (son of the founder, Walter M.), passed away in 1992. She has increased her knowledge since of the industry and ran the company successfully.

Santarelli said she is thankful for the wonderful personnel — 15 in all, including the part-time employees — who have helped run a successful business.

Santarelli, who maintains an apartment in Lancaster, makes her full-time home in Virginia, where she has lived there since she was married, she said. But because of rheumatoid arthritis, a progressive, autoimmune, debilitating disease, and because of the 125-mile commute each way (including two beltways where the traffic is horrible, she noted), it became time to shut down the business.

"I've always been a very, very high energy person," she said. She has put up with the heavy construction under way on Rt. 30, the main road to the stockyards north of Lancaster City, and the turmoil it has caused on truckers and buyers at the site.

"But that's not going to last forever," she said, hoping the construction, which has wreaked havoc on lots of commuters, will be over soon.

While the broker is leaving, the stockyards will continue.

The property, on a tract of Lititz Pike and Marshall Avenue, is not on the market and hasn't been sold, Santarelli said. Two other brokers, McCoy Cattle Company and Louis Lyon and Son, still operate at the stockyards.

Walter M. Dunlap was 17 in 1898 when he started the company. He began selling livestock at the old Lancaster Union Stockyards, which opened three years earlier to replace the overcrowded Stewart stockyards at North Plum Street and New Holland Avenue. By 1916, at age 34, Dunlap was the largest cattle dealer at the stockyards.

As a member of the stockyards board since 1983, Santarelli will continue her association. One of 11 on the board, and one of seven companies that worked at the yards through the years, Santarelli noted the property is not on the market and hasn't been sold, though they get offers constantly.

But she said that at some point, the property will be sold.

"It's inevitable," she said.

The board, of course, will have to decide on the right person and it would have to be a "quality project" for the 21-acre property. She will continue to serve on the stockyard board as president.

Monday's big livestock sale and the sheep and goats sale will mark the last business day for the broker. Santarelli, who grew up in Lancaster County, is a Lancaster Country Day School graduate. She has been married for 32 years and said that in her retirement, she plans to spend more time with her family.

Gov. Ridge Nominates Grumbine To PMMB

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Gov. Tom Ridge this week nominated Barbara Grumbine of Myerstown (Lebanon Co.) to serve as a member of the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB).

The PMMB is a three-member board that runs an independent state agency that oversees the dairy industry in the interest of consumers, producers and processors.

Gov. Ridge appoints the members, who are then considered for confirmation by the state Senate.

Grumbine would replace PMMB J. Robert Derry, Indiana, whose term has expired. Derry has served as a consumer advocate on the PMMB.

If confirmed by the state Senate, Grumbine would serve a six-year term.

A former Northeast Area Director of the former (since renamed and reorganized) USDA Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, she is currently vice chairperson of the the Lebanon County Committee of the USDA Farm Service Agency.

Grumbine is a member of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and a past president of the Lebanon County Society of Farm Women.

Danish Trade Delegation Visits Pennsylvania

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A trade delegation from Denmark visited Pennsylvania late last week as part of a visit to the United States to discuss trade issues with USDA and other officials in Washington D.C., and attend the Food Marketing Institute Show in Chicago.

According to state Department of Agriculture officials, the trade delegation included H.E.K. Erik Tygesen, Denmark's abmassador to the United States; and Henrik Dam Kristensen, minister of agriculture for Denmark.

While in Pennsylvania, the delegation toured facilities with Hatfield Quality Foods Inc., Moyer Packing Inc., and Rodale Institute. They also toured the Capitol, and later in the day were the featured guests of a reception at a Harrisburg hotel attended by 130 representatives of Pennsylvania food processing companies and commodity producers.

The visit to Pennsylvania was arranged througth the USDA, according to Russell C. Redding, state deputy secretary of agriculture for marketing, promotion and program services.

Redding said that, under Gov. Tom Ridge and Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr., efforts to expand trade for Pennsylvania agriculture have included communicating and developing a relationship with USDA officials, so that, when trade delegations visit the United States, a visit to Pennsylvania is considered as part of the itinerary.

While visitors to the United States can be impressed with the immensity of production facilities in the Middle Western states and other agricultural production operations throughout the United States, Pennsylvania offers high quality and strong quantity and proximity to coastal ports, especially the Port of Philadelphia.

Deputy Secretary Redding said that the reception was held to provide Pennsylvania processors and producers with an opportunity to meet with the delegation to discuss business and provide and opprotunity to develop relationships.

Redding explained that the USDA is one of the sponsors of the Food Marketing Institute Show, in Chicago, the largest domestic food show in the country.

As a result of coming to the United States to see the show, they also wanted to visit with USDA officials in Washington about trade issues.

Through relationships developed with the USDA, arrangements were made to have the delegation visit Pennsylvania while they were staying in Washington.

"The real benefit to us," Redding explained, "is ... the relationship building that provides an opportunity to strengthen our relationship with them. When it comes to dealing with business or trade issues, it is good to have established a relationship."

A trade delegation from Denmark visits with agricultural company representatives and state Department of Agriculture officials. From the left are Jerry Hostetter, president of the Pennsylvania-based livestock management company, Hostetter Management Company; H.E.K. Erik Tygesen, Denmark's ambassador to the United States; Henrik Dam Kristensen, minister of agriculture for Denmark; Pa. Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes Jr.; and Richard N. Swett, United States' ambassador to Denmark.

He said that lesson has been learned through some of the successes resulting from the Pennsylvania International Trade Show, now held in conjunction with the state Farm Show.

"I think what we have learned through the International Trade Show is that it is important to develop relationships. It takes those relationships to get trade issues resolved."

A contest named "36 squares" is an activity designed to allow FFA leaders to work together to achieve a goal. Through building on the previous steps of other members, cooperation through the winding, difficult course is necessary to reach the goal.

New county leaders for 1999-2000 are Jennifer Zimmerman, president; Darren Summy, vice president; Kimberly Landis, secretary; Craig Felpel, treasurer; Dan McMichael, sentinel; and Amanda Sauder, reporter.

PAADS Expands Junior Dairy Management Contest

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A highlight of the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show, the Junior Dairy Management contest draws youth from Pennsylvania and neighboring states to compete for a $1,000 first place scholarship.

The nationally recognized contest quizzes youth on their dairy farm and industry knowledge.

The contest this year will consist of seven classes: dairy heifer selection; linear trait analysis; meats identification; grain and forage identification; current issues in the dairy industry; milk quality and milk product identification; and new this year, a station featuring dairy housing and ventilation.

This year the contest will be on Tuesday, Sept. 21. Registration is at 9 a.m. and the contest begins at 10 a.m., in meeting Rooms A-E, located on the second floor of the Farm Show Complex, in Harrisburg.

Pre-registration is required and registrations must be mailed by Sept. 11.

The contest is made possible because of generous support from agri-businesses including Church and Dwight Co.-Arm & Hammer Products, Milk Specialties Co. Mfg. of Energy Booster 100, Pharmcia And Upjohn Animal Health, and Prince Agri Products, Inc.

The Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association will award the $1,000 first place scholarship. Additional financial support comes from Land O'Lakes Milk Cooperative.

Resource packets are available to assist individuals and teams in preparing for this contest. These training kits can be obtained by writing Christine Williams, Tulpehocken High School, 430 New Schaefferstown Road, Bernville, PA 19506. Training kits should be requested prior to Sept. 1.

Individual and team winners are recognized following the contest and will receive ribbons and premiums.

The top five finalists in the analytical portion of the contest will participate in an interview with three industry representatives where they will share their knowledge about the dairy industry. International Forum Focus Of U.S. Animal Health Policy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – The U.S. must fully support and be an active participant in international efforts to monitor, report, and control animal disease worldwide, according a top U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) official during the National Conference on Animal Health and International Trade held recently in Nashville,Tenn.

The conference was held in conjunction with the Livestock Conservation Institute's 83rd annual meeting, March 29-April 1, 1999.

"The U.S. needs to set an example that we can subscribe to," said USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service associate administrator Joan Arnoldi.

Arnoldi is the U.S. representative to the Office of International des Epizooties (OIE), a global assembly of animal health officials from 151 countries designated by the World Trade Organization as the lead group for setting animal health standards worldwide.

"OIE has some basic structure that is important to the U.S. It's where we can have some influence, and it's to our advantage to be involved," Arnoldi said.

"Disease reporting is why we really need the OIE. We need to support it, participate and embrace transparency," Arnoldi said. Transparency is a term used to describe the practice of making a country's animal health compliance requirements known to others in order to promote fair trade. "There's no better way to see (transparency) work than through involvement in OIE,"

"Disease reporting worldwide is improving significantly," Arnoldi said. "We subscribe religiously to the regular reporting of animal disease problems."

According to Arnoldi, OIE provides opportunity for the scientific community to help evaluate and deal with animal health problems wherever they may arise. The challenge for the future, she said will be for the Western Hemisphere nations to recognize their mutual interests and to begin working together.

"The U.S. is looking to draw the Western Hemisphere together. This presents some challenges because as you look to the south, there are some differences in customs, politics and agriculture," Arnoldi said. "The challenge is to get the group to focus on animal health issues rather than politics."

Farm Credit: Consolidation To Result In Largest Ag Lender

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The board chairmen of five East Coast Farm Credit associations jointly announced their associations' consolidation plans to the stockholders of the financial services cooperatives. This move will create the largest ag lender in the Mid-Atlantic region, with assets exceeding $1 billion, according to the association.

The five associations involved in these discussions are:

- Central Maryland Farm Credit of Westminster, Md., Robert N. Stabler, board chairman
- Chesapeake Farm Credit of Denton, Md., Marion R. Leaverton, board chairman
- Delaware Farm Credit of Dover, Del., Walter C. Hopkins, board chairman
- Keystone Farm Credit of Lancaster, Pa., Wilmer L. Hostetter, board chairman
- Marva Farm Credit of Salisbury, Md., Wayne Lambertson, board chairman.

The primary service area of the new Farm Credit association will be from the Lehigh Valley in Pennsylvania to the southern tip of Virginia on Delmarva Peninsula, and to the west past Hagerstown, Md. The new Farm Credit Association will serve more than 9,000 customers in four states.

The stockholders of these five associations were recently sent a letter informing them of the consolidation discussions. The consolidation is expected to provide many significant financial and operational benefits to the stockholders of these already successful and financially sound Farm Credit associationa. Working as cooperatives, these combining Farm Credit Associations have returned more than $82 million to their stockholder-borrowers through distribution of association earnings in the past nine years.

This combination will result in a very efficient, well-capitalized association. The larger business allows more segmentation of processes and specialization of staff. This will allow a match of customer needs with specific employees or groups of employees which will be of great benefit to the stockholder-borrowers of the new association. This consolidation will strengthen Farm Credit's leading position in the competitive ag lending markets.

Before the consolidation can proceed, the five Farm Credit association boards must reach agreement on several organizational, philosophical, and strategic issues. The directors of all the associations have shown a commitment to work together, and the board chairmen feel confident that the boards will be able to reach agreement on the remaining issues in order to make a formal recommendation on consolidation to association stockholders next spring. The stockholders of each association must vote to approve the consolidation in order for it to occur.

The new Farm Credit associaiton will offer loans and other financial services to customers located in Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Virginia.

Fiber Research Shows Promise For Productivity

NEWARK, Del. — Fiber is such a mysterious feed ration component. It is either taken largely for granted, or producers use it in an intuitively estimated minimum amount as insurance against disasters, such as rumen acidosis, low milk fat percentages or lame feet laminitis.

We know that our dairy cows, goats, sheep, and even camels and reindeer need a certain amount of fiber daily, because they are ruminants.

In their rumen are millions of fiber-digesting bacteria that depend on a regular feed supply of fiber for their livelihood, which in turn, in the guts, are exploited by the hosting ruminant in digesting them and their products.

Yet what is that "certain amount of fiber?"

We know that when the feed ration contains a lot of fiber, the rumen bacteria are happy but the hosting ruminant may be starved for nutrients for production, which reduces its daily milk output.

We also know that when the feed ration is low on fiber, the rumen bacteria (which want to digest fiber) are unhappy; they disappear to some extent and other bacteria take over, causing a drop in rumen pH to undersirable levels.

The consequences include low milk fat levels, foot laminitis and even death.

Finally, we even know that fiber of some source is not the same in rumen value as fiber from some other sources.

Take, for example, alfalfa hay — a most common source — and compare its fiber with soybean hulls or beet pulp or cotton seed or corn silage. Each has a different value for the rumen bacteria.

To make it even more serious, to be effective the fiber must be of a certain minimum length, no less than 1 inch, while the same fiber ground up is not.

Thus, over the years, rules of thumb developed, such as a minimum of 17 percent fiber in the daily ration or a ratio of roughage to concentrate in the daily ration intake with a minimum of 40 percent roughage, in addition to the 1-inch minimum length precaution.

When our dairy cows produced no more than 50 pounds of milk per day or our dairy goats make no more than 3 pounds, then feeding enough fiber daily was not much of a challenge.

Today, our cows routinely produce 100 pounds or more of milk daily for weeks, and our goats 10 pounds. Production like this requires a lot more nutrients in the same daily feed ration and tends to push fiber aside or to a minimum.

Even our national and international ration calculation programs and textbooks do not include good guidelines for daily requirement amounts of fiber at different levels of milk production and different body weights.

Usually only the amounts of dry matter, energy, protein, calcium, phosphorus, vitamin A and D are listed for maintenance of body weight, growth and milk production at different levels.

The only place to find some indication of fiber consideration is in lists of "recommended nutrient concentration in feed dry matter," where crude fiber is given as 17 percent and acid detergent fiber as 21 percent, regardless of how much the cows or goats are milking, or what source and length the fiber is, or digestibility.

Obviously, if the digestibility of fiber differs, then the supply of energy from its digestion differs for the benefit of the bacteria and the host ruminant. This is the focus of recent research after years of neglecting this challenging area.

How can we aid the rumen bacteria in the digestion of fiber?

The rumen bacteria employ enzymes, some called "cellulases," which the ruminant host does not possess, to split the cellulose in the feed fiber into its carbohydrate components. Success in this endeavor could influence and reduce the above empirical fiber requirements, thus improving feeding efficiency for high-producing dairy animals and increase farm profitability.

Why not supplement the feed ration with an enzyme solution, even before the bacteria start working?

Previous studies have had mixed results because of too many unknowns, such as interaction with different ration components, source and amount of enzymes, stability and application method.

New Canadian research showed, however, that a mixture of cellulase, xylanase and pectinase enzymes sprayed daily at lg/pound dry matter onto a TMR ration before feeding can benefit ration digestion significantly (Journal of Dairy Science 82(1999): 378-390).

Holstein cows were fed for 65 pounds milk production according to NRC recommendations a ration of 45 percent forage (alfalfa haylage and barley silage) and 55 percent concentrate based mainly on barley with a 17-percent protein content.

Enzyme supplementation increased fiber digestibility by 8 percent for neutral detergent fiber fractions in feeds and 11 percent for acid detergent fiber; starch digestibility increased by 6 percent.

Data also showed that there was improvement of microbial protein synthesis in the rumen due to the enzyme supplementation, improved digestion and absorption in the small intestine. Milk production increased by 3.5 pounds/day, and milk fat and milk protein contents were higher.

In further studies at the same station (Journal of Dairy Science 82(1999): 391-403), a 10-percent increase in milk production due to cellulase-xylanase enzyme supplementation was found. When alfalfa cubes or wafers were treated with an enzyme mixture before feeding, digestibility of fiber and protein in the rumen was increased, resulting in more microbial protein synthesis.

Response to enzyme supplementation was greater for the lg enzyme/pound feed than for the 0.5 g/pound dosage, indicating that optimum dosage needs to be established.

This is also supported by similar research in England (Journal of Dairy Science 82(1999): 611-617) with 30 mid-lactation Holstein cows fed alfalfa hay, alfalfa silage, whole cottonseed and concentrate on this now hot research topic, using .5, 1 and 2.5 milliliter of cellulase-xylanase enzyme solutions.

Cows increased their voluntary feed intake, produced significantly more milk with higher contents of milk fat and protein, and even gained body condition, on the medium-level enzyme supplementation. The results were considered economical.

Also, the potential exists for using lower-quality forage, while sustaining milk production levels.

This reminds us of older research and empirical experience in other countries, like Scandinavia, where the use of forage ammoniation in plastic-bagged hay or haylage is common to achieve higher nutritive value forage from fiber digestion, before the use of enzymes became better researched.

This ammoniation practice has never caught on in the United States.

Possibly the new enzyme research in the same direction — making fiber digestion better by direct application of cellulolytic enzyme sprays — may find interest on dairy farms now, because of its potential to increase dairy farm profitability significantly.

Sweet Facts About Vidalia Onions

Vidalia Onions...

- are a Georgia-grown yellow granex hybrid known for its sweet, mild flavor — first grown in 1931 in Toombs County, Georgia These onions have developed an international reputation as the "world's sweetest onion." Their mild flavor is due to the unique combination of soils and climate found in the 20-county production area
- are harvested from late April through mid-June. You can usually find them in your grocery store through mid-July. However, due to the introduction of controlled atmosphere storage, stored Vidalias are available through December.
- have a higher water and sugar content than storage onions, making them susceptible to bruising, and therefore, they must be handled with care. The key to preserving them and to prevent bruising is to keep the onions cool, dry and separated. Favorite methods of storage are to wrap each onion separately in paper towels or newspaper and place in the refrigerator, lay onions on elevated racks or screens (not touching) in a cool place or hang in a cool, dry, well-ventilated area in the legs of clean sheer panty hose with a knot between each onion
- offer a distinctly different flavor — milder and sweeter — than any other onions, so they are excellent in salads and sandwiches where hot onions would be overpowering Thick slices are perfect on hamburgers or with grilled steak.
- are a good source of Vitamin C, are low in calories and are fat-, cholesterol- and sodium-free.

Win Bed And Breakfast Getaway

Request a copy of the "Special Occasions" recipe brochure containing this recipe for New England Apple Cheddar Bread and other festive brunch recipes and you will automatically be entered in a drawing to win a free two-night stay at a Bed and Breakfast.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For most Americans, waking up to the smell of coffee is nice, but waking up to the aroma of bacon, eggs and other terrific breakfast treats is even better. Especially if you're not the one doing the cooking!

This spring, the American Dairy Association (ADA) is giving consumers the opportunity to have such a leisurely morning as part of its "Special Occasions Bed and Breakfast" campaign. By simply calling 1-888-799-6455 to request the ADA's new Special Occasions recipe brochure, consumers will be automatically entered in a drawing for a two-night stay at the Inn at Olde New Berlin, in New Berlin.

The ADA "Breakfast with Cheese – Recipes for Special Occasions" brochure contains six easy-to-prepare, mouthwatering creations, including a Zippy Cheese Artichoke Oven Omelet; Swiss Cheese, Chicken and Crab Crepes, and New England Apple Cheddar Bread.

The Inn at Olde New Berlin is a traditional Victorian village inn described by the Philadelphia Inquirer as a "luxurious base for indulging in a clutch of quiet pleasures..." The owners' restoration of the turn-of-the-century house has preserved a gracious heritage, highlighted by spacious guest rooms, antique furnishings, and the award-winning Gabriel's Restaurant offering brunch and dinner.

Entry deadline for the Bed and Breakfast contest is May 24. The winner will be selected by random drawing on May 27 and notified May 31.

Here is a recipe from the brochure.

NEW ENGLAND APPLE CHEDDAR BREAD

1/2 cup (1 medium apple) baking apples, peeled and finely chopped.
1/2 cup (2 ounces) sharp Cheddar cheese, grated
1/4 cup milk

Preheat oven to 350° F. Butter a 9x5-inch loaf pan. In a large bowl combine the sugar, flour, cinnamon and nuts. In a separate bowl combine eggs, butter, apples, cheese and milk. Add to sugar mixture. Spread batter into the prepared pan. Bake for 1 hour. Cover with foil if it gets brown too quickly. Makes 1 loaf.

Postcards Open Window To Past

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

REINHOLDS (Lancaster Co.) — Ask Harold Moyer to name the presidents and their opponents from the early 1900s until the present.

Ask him about the trolley that ran between Ephrata and Lebanon where milk receiving stations were located along the line.

Ask him about Pennsylvania's 213 covered bridges, about tractors and machinery, and how they changed during the century.

Harold knows all these answers plus many more from rummaging through old postcards.

As Moyer flips through some of the postcards from more than 100,000 in his collection, he said, "I always was a history buff, so this is really down my alley."

Postcard collecting is a favorite pastime for the retired farmer and his wife Ruth, who live in the Reinholds area of the county.

The Moyers' interest in postcards stems back 25 to 30 years, when Moyer was given a box filled with memorabilia from his grandmother. He and his wife were intrigued with the postcards that pictured local and political scenes. They started looking for postcards when they attended public auctions.

"Years back, cards were cheap," Moyer said. Today some postcards can bring several hundred dollars. Generally these are postcards with real photographs of historic significance rather than artist renderings. When buildings are changed or torn down, postcards of the buildings become more valuable.

"The postcard craze was between 1906 and World War I," Moyer said. During those years, few people had telephones, so communication between friends and family members of other households was done primarily by written postcards.

Before television, children spent hours looking at postcard collections that parents, grandparents, and acquaintances stored in albums and boxes.

Postcards offer historical glimpses of the past. They show how our ancestors lived, traveled, played, and were entertained.

Postcards show hundreds of buildings no longer in existence. These cards reveal how bustling businesses once contributed to the significance of the area.

Postcards show such scenes as a horse-drawn bakery truck, typical in many communities that had their own bakeries. Railroad stations, general stores, curb markets, canal barges, ferry boats, churches, machinery, vintage signs, trolley and train stations, devastating fires, and other significant events are captured on postcards. Generally local merchants were responsible for publishing many hometown views.

"If it wasn't for postcards there would be no documentation of many of these places and events," Moyer said.

Some postcards are of a more personal nature. On one, a unique wedding announcement pictured Mr. and Mrs. John M. Hoober, a bride and groom. The write-up on the card includes these words: "...I, the groom, am in the company with my father who is one of the leading cattle dealers in the county. My end of the job is driving bulls, steers, hogs, etc. around to the farmers. . . The bride is an accomplished young lady, well versed in washing, scrubbing, cooking, etc; and can cook water without scorching it. . . ."

Messages scrawled on the back of postcards add to the value of the card. Messages are sometimes interesting, humorous, and occasionally were written in Pennsylvania Dutch.

Postcards first became popular in Europe. According to Moyer, the first postcard issued in the U.S. was May 13, 1973.

Before 1907, postcards did not have a divided back. After 1907, a line differentiated between the spot to address the card and the place to write a message.

During the early years, it was not uncommon for a mailcarrier to pick up mail at one home and deliver it a few houses down the road on the same day. He hand-cancelled the stamp.

When the Moyers first became interested in postcards, they col lected local scenes and towns.

"Now we collect everything," Moyer said.

Ruth categories every card. In addition to cards capturing the history of an event or place, other popular collections are comics, advertisements, and holidays.

Ruth has holiday cards of typical holidays such as Christmas and Valentine's Day, but she also has rare cards of April Fool's, Groundhog Day, and Labor Day cards.

Although Ruth has both a 20-drawer and a 16-drawer filing cabinet made especially for cataloging postcards, and meticulously files each card, she said that her husband "got a computer in his head or I would forget which ones we have."

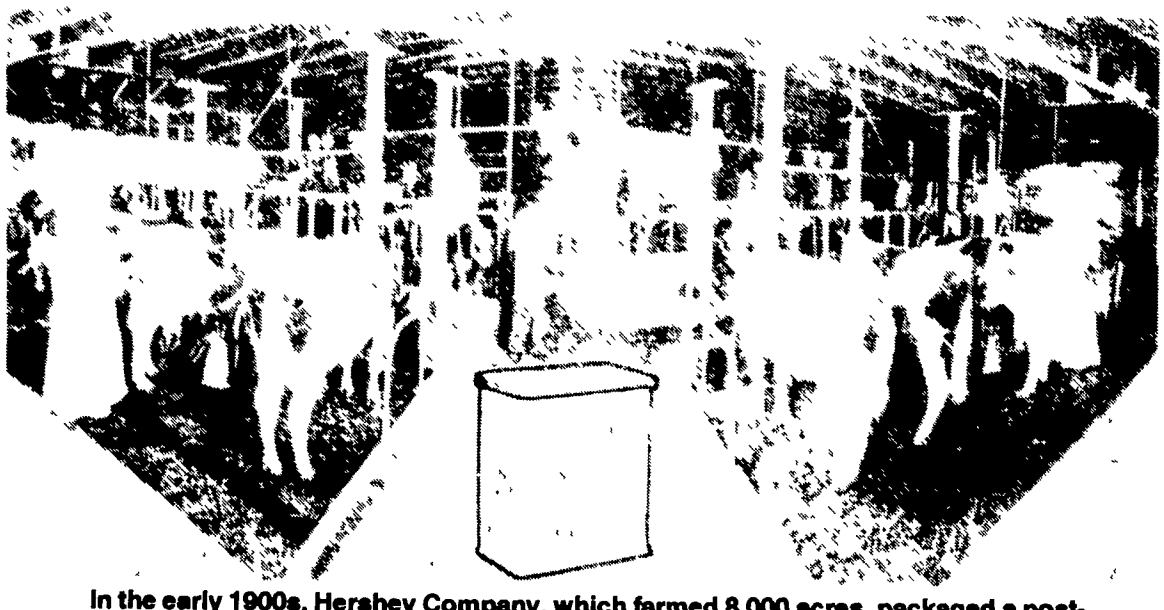
Septi cards, linen, white borders, photochrome, leather, are all descriptive of postcards used in different years and help today's collectors determine the age of the card and its authenticity.

Some postcards were not complete alone. Some required four cards to complete one picture. In these, the sender would mail one card every day or every week in order for the set to be completed. Other unusual postcards included the mechanical card with a turn

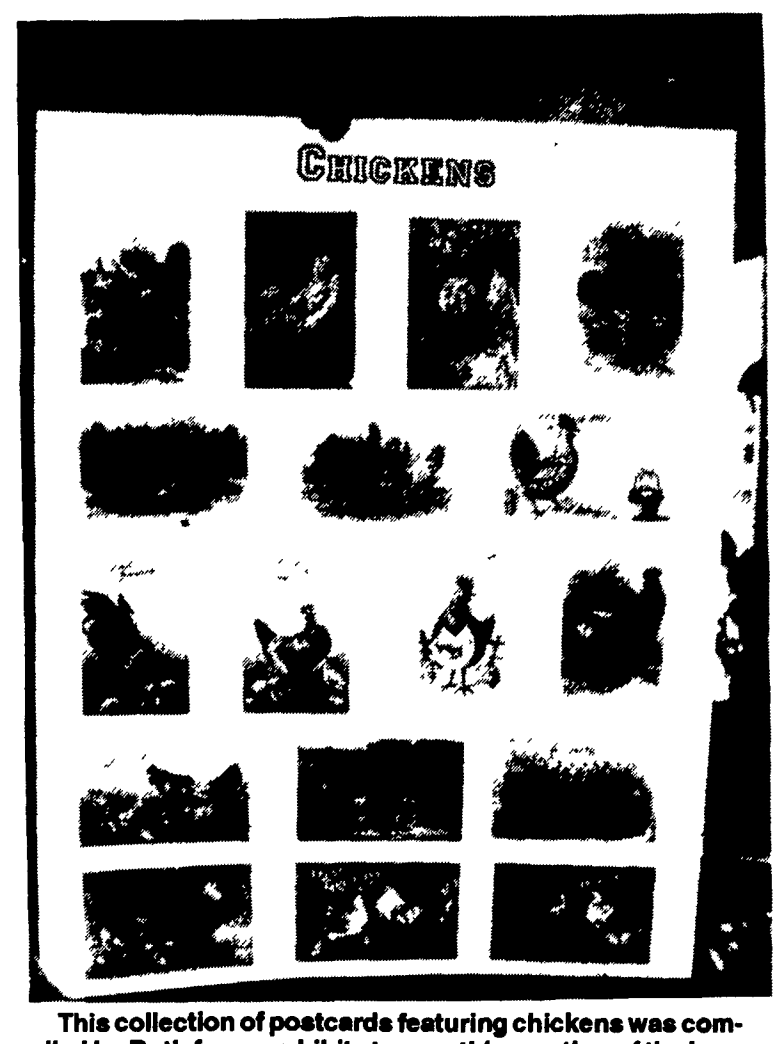
(Turn to Page B8)

"The postcard craze was between 1906 and World I," said Harold Moyer. He and his wife Ruth have collected more than 100,000 postcards. "If it weren't for postcards there would be no documentation of many places that no longer exist," Moyer said. He considers postcards as an excellent source for learning history.

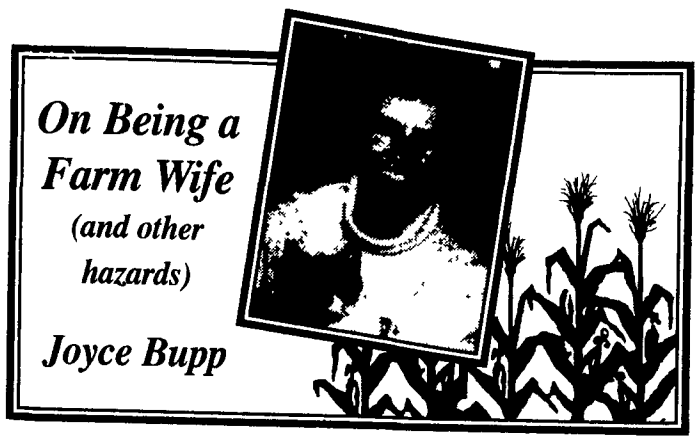
Postcard advertisements such as this one picturing Sharples Cream Separators of West Chester were a popular form of advertising in the early 1900s.



In the early 1900s, Hershey Company, which farmed 8,000 acres, packaged a postcard with each candy bar. This shows the interior of one of the company's barns and milking machines.



This collection of postcards featuring chickens was compiled by Ruth for an exhibit at a monthly meeting of the Lancaster County Postcard Club, where members buy, sell, and trade postcards.



My apologies.

This column is a week late.

Or....maybe it isn't.

Just because the calendar said that last week was to be our annual celebration of Mother's Day, does that cut out any other time to offer a salute to mothers? The mothers I know love and care for their kids (young and old) 365 days of the year (366 in leap years), so why limit our expressions of gratitude and admiration for all they do to one day a year?

So, will you accept that as "excuse" reasoning?

Because I was so busy being a mom the last couple of weeks that it got in the way of writing a timely column saluting mothers. Fact is, I did one far out ahead, and completely forgot about Mother's Day. See, after 10 years of being a cross-country-sort of mom and grandmother to our eldest and her family, a new era has entered The Farmer's and my lives.

All of our kids are back in the nest. Or, more accurately, they are in adjacent nests.

Our fist indication that the West Coast offspring might return to her roots came last fall, some weeks after their summer visit. There were two little guys growing up fast in their family, two little guys who love few things more than "farming" in dirt piles with their miniature lines of equipment. Two little guys and a yellow labrador retriever confined to the – though spacious and completely fenced – suburban back yard. Two little guys whose contact with domestic animals was mostly limited to the numerous ducks in their nearby parks and the cattle, horses, and sheep they occasionally came into contact with at the zoo or on country drives.

"I want to go back to Pennsylvania and help Grandpa farm," announced the three-year-old eldest, about a week following their return to the West Coast last summer.

That was certainly not the clincher argument in their lengthy, personal ponderings about where to live during this child-rearing time of their young-family lives. Having all their immediate family 3,000 miles away played only part of the role in their decision, which meant uprooting from a lovely home and neighborhood, solid jobs, and many friends.

But back to their roots they have come. And with them comes the promise of a soon-to-be third grandchild to further bless two sets of grandparents and several great-grandmothers.

Their belongings have made the long and rather eventful crossing of the country, driven by our son-in-law and supervised by the four-year-old, while mother-to-be and younger son took the swifter airlines route. Despite several technical-repair mishaps and a wheel fire which plagued the trailer, holding their family vehicle behind their renting moving truck, both people and property arrived safely and intact.

Two extended families rejoiced while lugging boxes, furniture, and tripping over the trio of little boys which included a small cousin. They are settled sort of into the smaller confines of the farm's tenant mobile-home-with-addition until they choose a more permanent site.

And, for the first time in our lives, we celebrated Mother's Day, the official one, with four generations on-site.

But in reality, every day has become mother's – and grandparents' – day, as they pop in for lunch, ride the toy tractors on the deck, lug bottles to the baby calves, throw bedding to the heifers, shovel silage to the cows, feed Grandpa's goldfish and best of all come with arms outstretched for a hug. It takes longer, sometimes, to get it done. But it's a heck of a lot more fun.

Even as we rejoice at the blessing of the family reunited, our younger son has now announced his intent to move West, where the lure of working in big-scale agriculture beckons.

Here we go again.

dial, which produced a different scene on the same card.

Generally the Moyers only attend sales in the area in search of postcards, but their collection includes postcards from all over the world. Sets of intricately embroidered cards from France and Spain show how important the cards were during the early 1900s.

Although the Moyers know that they could make a hefty profit on some of their acquisitions, they say they find it hard to sell a card unless they have a duplicate.

The Moyers often refer to books detailing postcards available and describing how many are in a series. Some postcards are marked on the back identifying them as part of a series, but many postcards have been printed without any written record.

Sometimes it takes a long time to complete a series. Moyer is collecting Uncle Sam cards and needs two more to complete the installment.

The semi-retired Moyers said their hobby is an interesting pastime. The Moyers were former farmers in the Blainsport area. Later Moyer worked as a butcher, and in the last 10 years has been a part-time plumber. The couple have five children and 10 grandchildren.

The Moyers belong to the Lancaster County Postcard Club, which meets monthly, and attend public sales on a regular basis in search of cards to add to their collection.

At the monthly club meetings, postcard collectors trade, sell, and buy. More than 300 members make up the Lancaster County Postcard Club. About 60 to 80 members attend monthly. The club is open for anyone, including out-of-state visitors. The monthly meetings are held at the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Lancaster, on the third Monday of every month, starting at 5:30 p.m.

A hardcover book with more than 500 postcards picturing Lancaster city and county scenes has recently been printed by the Postcard Club. In addition to both full-color and black and white copies of postcards, the 180-page book includes a brief history of postcards and historical facts in the captions that accompany each pictured postcard.

Books can be picked up from club members or mailed for $30 plus $7 for postage and handling. Make check payable to LCPC Book Fund and send to 136 River Bend Park, Lancaster, PA 17602.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — Terri Laskowski wanted a recipe that tastes like Pizza Hut's pan pizza. Thanks to Marilyn Huber, Myerstown, and Anna Joyce Martin, East Earl, for sending recipes.

Pizza Hut Pizza

2 tablespoons yeast
⅔ cup lukewarm water
2 teaspoons sugar
Let stand 5 minutes.
2 cups cold water
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon salt
¼ teaspoon garlic salt or powder
½ teaspoon oregano leaves
3 cups flour

Beat until mixture is smooth. Beat in yeast mixture. Add 3½ cups more flour. Work until elastic. Let rise until double. Bake in cast iron pans for best results. Put a few tablespoon oil in pan, then press in dough. Let rise 10 minutes.

Add your favorite pizza sauce, cheese, and other toppings such as pepperoni, sausage, brown hamburger, bacon, ham, green peppers, and onion.

This is a large recipe that makes two large pizzas or three pan sized. If using cast iron pans, bake 10-12 minutes at 375-400 degrees until crust is brown on bottom. Other pans take about 20 minutes. Can freeze after baking then reheat until cheese is melted. The cast iron makes the crust taste more like those made by Pizza Hut.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

May is the month of flowers. Again this year our daughter in Texas sent me a beautiful bouquet. She started this tradition when she was a little girl who left a bunch of violets and dandelions on the doorstep on May 1. She would knock on the door and then run and hide. It is a nice way to be remembered each year.

Last year I bought a "white" cactus plant and eventually it bloomed white with a lavender edge. Just now it is covered with large dark pink flowers. It is amazing! My African violet is vying with it as new pink flowers bloom each day. My amaryllis was late blooming this year but made up for it by having three enormous red flowers. My husband watered the azaleas with an acid solution and they too are a deep pink.

Last week we checked on the camper in Snyder County and found that it was home to some mice over the winter. They chewed tow big holes in a comforter and left their droppings everywhere. What a mess. A pin-sized hole in the copper pipe made a problem for my husband I suppose one should think of these happenings as making life interesting.

We had a reunion of sorts at our home last week when we entertained a niece from Germany, her husband, and Allen's brothers. I fed them a leg of lamb plus four vegetables and that does not count cole slaw and pickles. They spent an afternoon reminiscing. As they get older it seems more important to have these gatherings. So, they visit much more frequently than when they were busy earning a living for their families

ANSWER — N. Koons, Lebanon, wanted recipes for jellies. Thanks to Martha Weaver, East Earl, for sending the following recipes:

Rhubarb Jelly

5 cups rhubarb, cut up fine
4 cups sugar

Mix together and let stand overnight. Boil 5 minutes. Remove from heat. Add 3-ounce package strawberry gelatin. Quickly ladle into jars and seal. Makes 2½ pints.

Peach Jelly

5 cups crushed peaches
1 medium can crushed pineapple
7 cups sugar

Boil together ingredients for 15 minutes. Stir often. Add 1 6-ounce package orange gelatin. Cook until dissolved. Quickly ladel into jars and seal.

Learn About Veal

Veal calves are raised in many family farms.

Veal calves are male calves that do not produce milk. Most veal calves are Hostein cattle that are black and white. The calves weigh about 100 pounds when they are born and grow to 400-500 pounds.

The calves are fed twice a day in a safe and warm barn. A vetrinarian helps the farmer keep the calves healthy by visiting the farm and checking each calf for sickness. If the verterinarian finds a sick calf, it is treated immediately. A farmer likes to keep all his calves healthy.

Computers are often used in cow barns to help keep the barns cool on hot days and warm on cold days.

The farmer likes to raise the healthiest veal calves that he can. Veal calves provide nutritious meat that tastes good and is packed with vitamins, minerals, and protein. Veal is low in fat and high in protein.

Here are some fun activities from the American Veal Association that will help you learn about veal.

Why are there so many noisy insects this year?
Those singing bugs are called periodical cicadas, and they have a life cycle that's very different from most insects
Periodical cicadas (say sick-AY-duhs) only emerge from their underground nests once every 13 or 17 years
Usually, insects hatch from their eggs every year
Here's what happens: Immature periodical cicadas, called nymphs, develop underground and suck juices from plant roots When it's time, they emerge from the soil at night and climb onto nearby trees to molt into winged adults (You can find their outer skins, called exoskeletons, attached to tree trunks and twigs)
Then the singing begins
Males vibrate special membranes, called timballs, to make a distinct buzzing sound If the insects are in your area, you'll know by the sound — thousands upon thousands of cicadas buzz in unison to attract female cicadas
By August, the cicada eggs have hatched and the tiny nymphal cicadas drop to the ground and burrow underground to feed and begin their 13- or 17 year development
So why all at once? Scientists think it's the cicadas' version of safety in numbers A few of the cicadas might die, but even a hungry animal couldn't eat thousands of cicadas Even if it could, an animal or another insect would have to match its life cycle to the cicada's and have babies only once every 13 or 17 years That doesn't happen, so periodical cicadas don t have any natural enemies — except for a few cats, raccoons, songbirds and dogs that think they're tasty!

Arabian Horse Farms Open To Tour

WEST GROVE (Chester Co) – On Sunday, May 23, the South East District of Pennsylvania Arabian Horse Association (PAHA) will sponsor a day of fun and learning for all horse lovers.

Five Arabian hoarse farms will be open to the public from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Admission is free. Visitors drive their own vehicles from farm to farm at their own pace, visiting as many farms as they choose, and spending as much time as they like at each farm.

The primary purpose of the day is to introduce people to the Arabian horse. The day promises to be fun and educational for all. there will be items of interest for both the person contemplating buying their first horse and for the current Arabian enthusiast.

PAHA members support the farms by providing exhibitions of Arabians in may different disciplines. The exhibitions include Hunter, English, Western Pleasure, Native Costume and Dressage. Horses will be shown at Liberty and in-hand.

In addition to exhibitions, visitors are provide ample opportunity to enjoy the Arabian up close and personal. Visitors should come away from the day with a good understanding of the versatility of the Arabian horse and the understanding that the Arabian is a very intelligent, kind, loving companion, extremely loyal to its master.

All five farms are easily accessible from route U.S. 1 between Avondale and the Pa./Md. Border. Persons may obtain a flyer with directions at local feed and tack stores or by calling Ron Glidden (610) 869-9878.

Glidden Arabians of West Grove will focus visitors on both the versatility and the kind, loving nature of the Arabian. Owners Ron and Bernice Glidden raise each new foal with a lot of love and attention to enhance the bonding instinct Arabians naturally have with humans. They breed both Straight Egyptians and Domestic Arabians, all with exceptional temperaments.

Drs. Janey and John Lee of "Sham Felek Arabians" in Rising Sun, Md. will be on the tour. Dr. Janey Lee is a longtime breeder of black and Egyptian/Domestic cross Arabians. At Sham Felek, seven stallions stand at public stud. Janey is very active on the local Amateur Circuit and encourages others to get out and enjoy their Arabians on this circuit.

Joyce and Paula Campanelli of Equine Enterprises, Ltd. in Landenburg will be on the tour. The Campanellis focus on breeding very athletic horses that include straight Egyptian, Egyptian/Domestic cross and Anglo-Arabians. Senior sire "THA Sareei Moniet" excelled at cross-country, adding both beauty and style to the sport. Beautiful horses that excel in performance!

Randy Stoneback Arabians of Oxford is a full service training and breeding facility. A long- time breeder of Crabbet Arabians, Randy stands 12 stallions at public stud. He accepts horses for training and conditioning and has a lot of experience coaching amateur riders competing on the Class A Circuit.

Longtime Straight breeders. Yorklyn Arabians of Hockessin, Del. will also open their farm to visitors. Ahmad and Jenny Amer imported their three foundation mares directly from Egypt. They have carefully crossed these mares with some of the best straight Egyptian stallions in the world. The results speak for themselves. Due to personal circumstances the Amers will be able to present their horses only at 11 a.m.

Together with Beef Council Promotions Director Carrie Bryant, the Council provided a sampling to the media and major agricultural organizations of ready to eat, rotisserie-style beef and other new products available at the first-ever New Products Forum late last week at the Council's Middletown headquarters. Beef Forum Serves Up Ready To Eat Products

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — People want "easy" beef, said Tammy Weaver, industry relations director for the Pennsylvania Beef Council.

Together with Beef Council Promotions Director Carrie Bryant, the Council provided a sampling to the media and major agricultural organizations of ready to eat, rotisserie-style beef and other new products available at the first-ever New Products Forum late last week at the Council's Middletown headquarters.

Responding to competition from ready-to-eat, rotisserie style chicken, popular with lots of consumers in retail outlets, the Council wants to promote the Rotiss-A-Roast™ Beef, available at Giant Food Stores in Pennsylvania.

Weaver said consumers want beef "easy to prepare, easy to cook, and easy to clean up," she said. The Council, as well as the supermarket chain, are doing their utmost to promote the boneless beef.

The product specifications for the Rotiss-A-Roast includes some of the material the packer finds hard to move — the pectoral, top blade, bolar/triceps, and sirloin tips. The material uses USDA Low Choice or better at 1 to 1.5 pounds of unit weight. Formulation is up to 15 percent injection (up to one percent salt). Shelf-life is 21 days when stored at 40 degrees or below. The product can be frozen and thawed prior to cooking.

The rotisserie is cooked at 350 degrees for 45-60 minutes to reach an internal temperature of 145 degrees. Gas ovens require the use of spits with planetary rotation. The product can be held up to two hours after cooking (using a 150-degree warmer).

The product has six grams of fat, two grams of saturated fat, and 61 milligrams of cholesterol.

At the recent "New Face of Beef" New Products Forum, according to Carrie Bryant, Pennsylvania Beef Council promotions director, the Rotiss-A-Roast serves a family of three to four and will retail for $6.99-$8.99 a roast.

Processors for the Rotiss-A-Roast include American Foods, Quantum Foods, and Excel.

The launch of the new beef product comes within days of the new advertising campaign from the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA), a theme designed to build consumer awareness of new heat-and-sever beef products available in the supermarket fresh meat case. The campaign is themed "In the Next 10 Minutes" and shows consumers how to prepare a homestyle beef meal in minutes, using a microwave.

The checkoff-funded campaign also brings back the "Beef. It's What's For Dinner" advertising tag, including a voice-over from actor Sam Elliott. The tag, developed by Leo Burnett USA, includes the familiar "Rodeo" music by Aaron Copeland.

The NCBA put $25 million behind the marketing program, according to Beef Council news

Early To Bed, Early To Rise Is April Coberly's Exercise

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — April Coberly, at age 17 isn't even a farm kid, but if she wasn't in bed by 9:30 p m and up again at 5:00 a.m., she would never get everything done that adds up to a super-busy, but very productive schedule

Her 4-H projects are many. They take a chunk of time for the Meyersdale Area High School junior now preparing for a summer sojourn in Costa Rica with the Spanish Club.

She has this habit, which others love, of never being able to say "no," when she is asked to do something

You could say, as well, that she cooks in three tongues – English, Spanish and French

"My Spanish teacher thinks that I am going to be the next Martha Stewart," she said, laughing

It seems that when something must be celebrated, April is never afraid to tackle a tempting concoction for the club's fiesta even if she never made it before.

Her Creme Brulee, a French custard, won the Desserts category last year at the county 4-H Foods Revue. The Club was thrilled to hold the event at the Oakhurst Tea Room. It was 4-H members' first experience holding the event in a real restaurant.

"I really like that," April said of Foods Revue, "because you get to see kids from around the county."

April also makes the Spanish counterpart called Flan

When April was 14, she and a teammate did a winning pie demonstration in a county contest. They got to repeat the exercise at 4-H State Days.

En route to the bus connection in Somerset, while Coberly was holding the finished pie on her lap that she was taking for the competition, a mishap occurred A dog ran onto the highway The driver managed to stop, but someone else wasn't so successful and the force of a minor collision was sufficient to smash the pretty pastry.

April and her teammate courageously continued. At Penn State they simply showed the 9-inch disaster and explained what had happened. One delighted onlooker was more than happy to take it home, April said.

April Coberly is ready to Christen a new flower pot that has a plastic drain piece to put in the bottom.

April Coberly is pictured with tulips about to bloom and a row of trees transplanted from her grandfather's woods.

She has adored posies ever since she was quite small, even the early spring dandelion, the golden blossom most folks usually take for granted.

The young woman is hooked on horticulture. But then so is her mother, Patricia Coberly, one of two horticulture leaders in the White Oak 4-H Club.

Mrs Coberly, carrying on a family tradition is a devout gardener with a big plot in the back yard where her two offspring can be occupied pulling weeds.

When she was little, April had a flower garden before she knew about the ABCs.

"I always had fences out really early," she said. "After something was planted, I checked every day to see if it came up."

At first she even plucked off the blossoms on pumpkin and squash vines That didn't go on long, naturally. She learned that the flower could not be disturbed if she wanted to see a vegetable grow in its place

Last year, April did a horticulture demonstration on spring planting. After winning at 4-H State Days, she pursued the opportunity to attend the National Junior Horticultural Association Conference in Memphis, Tennessee.

Many who were there were college students.

"Thinking on the spot was the worst," she said, about questions from the judges, who grilled her about soil quality and other technical information.

But she made a tiny cut in the tough nasturtium seed to encourage an earlier sprouting of the plant, to illustrate a procedure called scarification.

She also used the water soaking procedure for a field corn variety that was covered with pink poison to prevent diseases and discourage mischievous birds.

"Water soaking gives it a head start," she said. "You put them in a jar of warm water and allow them to stand overnight before planting."

She also used a potato, peony bulb, and a pine tree in the demonstration.

At home, in the midst of her own planting, April brought out one of the new flower pots that saves anyone with a green thumb the worry of adding drainage materials.

Even though April says you should always put small rocks, peat moss, or gravel in the bottom, pots on the market nowadays come drainage-ready.

"The newer pots are equipped to take care of this problem," she reported, showing the model she was about to fill with potting mix.

An interesting hint turned up during the research Coberly did for the project. Apparently, styrofoam packing peanuts will also work in the drainage capacity

She knows a course of action to follow if her planting effort flops When the seed company is reputable, call and report the date and lot number stamped on the packet A failure may result from bad seeds instead of any mistake the person made, she said.

The green beans she raised and canned certainly didn't have a problem. Instead, when she entered them at Somerset County Fair last year they earned first prize. She won the Ball award.

Applesauce, peach jam, and pickles all passed under the judge's eye

Mrs Coberly has discovered over the years that the family garden is an ideal laboratory for administering other therapy, as well It's the safest place in the world for heart to heart talks between mothers and daughters.

"My mom and I used to have our best talks in the garden," she reported, adding humorously, "You always had privacy because nobody was going to come to the garden and (offer to) pull weeds."

April's 4-H projects include beef, swine, dog, rabbit and cat as far as animals. Then there's photography, sewing, cooking, of course, and plants.

Add track, chorus, drama club, the Future Business Leaders of America and presiding officer of her 4-H Club — April is the fulfilled young woman you see Billy Coberly is her dad and Norman is her younger brother.

April shares the following recipes.

Flan

4 tablespoons sugar
2 cups milk
4 eggs, beaten
2 tablespoons sugar
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Caramelize sugar in small skillet until a light brown syrup forms. Spread on sides and bottom of six custard cups, immediately. Scald milk in large saucepan. Stir in eggs, sugar, salt and vanilla, gradually. Blend well. Pour into custard cups. Set cups in pan of hot water. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until knife inserted in center, comes out clean Loosen custards; invert Chill before serving.

Creme Brulee

1 pint heavy cream
1 tablespoon sugar
4 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla
3/4 cup light brown sugar (packed)

Pour cream into top of double boiler; cook, covered, over hot water for five minutes, or until just heated through. Remove from heat. Add sugar, stir until dissolved. Beat yolks well, beat into cream Add vanilla; stir well Pour into 8-inch square glass baking dish, set in pan of water Bake at 300 degrees for 50 minutes or until set Cool, chill well. Sprinkle brown sugar over custard. Broil 6-inches from source of heat just until sugar is melted Cool, refrigerate Tap caramel to break before serving

April and her mother Patricia Coberly share a love for gardening. Mrs. Coberly says there is no place more suited than a garden for heart to heart talks. Nobody else wants to pull the weeds so there are no intruders.

Teens Attend PCC Institute

PATRICIA O. BUTLER
Wyoming County Extension Agent/4-H

MONTROSE (Susquehanna Co.) – Fourteen high school students from Wyoming and Susquehanna County recently participated in the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperative One Day Institute held at the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office in Susquehanna County. The one-day program sponsored by the Susquehanna/Wyoming Youth Council of the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives is designed to educate area youth about business organizations and structures, the roles cooperative businesses play in the economic life of a community, and how people work together to solve problems through cooperatives.

After a short round of social activities led by extension agent Joann Kowalski, and brief introductions by Susqu/Wyo PCC Chairperson Donna Brown, AgChoice Farm Credit, and Ginny Beeman, vice chairperson, Susqu/Wyo PCC Gerald Ely, Cooperative Development specialist with the U S Department of Agriculture presented a video "Cooperatives in the American Business System," In the discussion that followed, participants were surprised to learn that there are 47,000 cooperative businesses operating in the United States.

Representatives from local cooperatives: Don Hibbard, Sire Power; Jim Zick, Claverack Rural Electric; Charolotte Severcool, AgChoice Farm Credit; and Bill Beeman, Dairylea; were on hand to discuss how their cooperative works and to describe the benefits that each offers its members.

After a nutritious lunch, quizzes were administered to evaluate each participant's understanding of cooperatives. The five students who scored highest on the cooperative quiz, and who have also demonstrated leadership through participation in extracurricular school activities, FFA, FHA, 4-H and/or other community programs were offered an opportunity to attend a four-day youth leadership program conducted by the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives and Penn State University

Abby Wilson, Angela Adams, Bradley Mitchell, Jason Corey, and Daniel Karhnak from Susquehanna County, were awarded scholarships to attend the "Summer Institute" which will be held at Shippensburg University in June. Participants exhibiting leadership qualities during the Shippensburg University program will be invited to attend the National Institute of Cooperative Education (NICE) on a full scholarship. NICE will be held in Snowbird, Utah in August.

The NCBA put $25 million behind the marketing program, according to Beef Council news release. Their reasoning? About 80 percent of Americans spend 45 minutes or less preparing meals at home, according to the NCBA, and consumers wait until late afternoon (till 4:30 p.m. or later) to make their dinner plans because of their hectic schedules. Here, several Quantum Steaks meals.

release. Their reasoning? About 80 percent of Americans spend 45 minutes or less preparing meals at home, according to the NCBA, and consumers wait until late afternoon (till 4:30 p.m. or later) to make their dinner plans because of their hectic schedules.

The beef industry's goal is to sell 100 million pounds of the rotisserie-style beef by the year 2004.

At the new products forum, products served including beef and veal items: Classic Main Courses pot roast and beef tips in gravy, donated by Flint Hills Foods, Alma, Kan.; Rotiss-A-Roast from American Foods Group, Green Bay, Wis.; veal bacon, by Catelli Brothers, Collingswood; veal fingers and marinara sauce, a SISCO branded product; marinated steaks by Quantum Foods, Chicago, Ill. and another quantum Foods product, the Steak Melt Sandwich, served at Dairy Queen restaurants.

According to Bryant, the Classic Main Courses beef pot roast is a cooked beef pot roast offering consumers a delicious, homestyle flavored entree in seven minutes. Also, beef tips with gravy rounds out the Classic Main Courses offerings, which comes in a 17-ounce microwaveable bag, ideal for serving over rice and noodles. Each entree provides three to four servings and is priced between $4.99-$5.99, with less than six grams of fat per serving.

Recipes are included in each entree to help consumers turn their Classic Main Courses into great-tasting, complete dinners, which are as easy as they are economical, she noted.

Bryant noted that for several Monday nights, the Beef Council will provide samples of products at the Harrisburg Senators games on City Island.

Tammy Weaver, industry relations director, noted that less money from the Council is being used for paid advertising and more is being "refocused and reallocated to consumer spending." She spoke about the efforts of the beef checkoff and how it is increasing awareness of beef as part of a nutritional diet.

Weaver also noted how everybody in the dairy business is also in the beef business, because of culled cows marketed for beef.

Restaurants such as Ponderosa, Bonanza, and Golden Corral use dairy beef, which provides for many people an "affordable meal," noted Weaver.

For those who want additional educational material about beef, she noted several Internet sites, including teachfree.com. The council has its own Web site, www.pabeef.org.

At the forum, Bryant also introduced the successful Patty Melt, star of the popular food safety program aimed at elementary school children. A four-minute video created by a Landisville-based company highlighted the program, which has traveled to more than 600 schools since February.

Alexa Kroutch, director of veal programs for the council and administrator for the American Veal Association, said the new veal bacon has 35 percent less fat than pork bacon. The products, including veal fingers, are based on the chuck and breast (the bacon comes from breast meat).

According to David Ivan, executive director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council, the more the Council can do to promote different cuts of beef in a variety of ways is good for the industry, he said.

The promotional idea for the new products forum came as a result of a meeting held with editors of industry publications last December in Baltimore, noted Weaver. The Council is thinking of scheduling similar meetings once a year, hosting media and ag organizations, introducing products and reviewing the promotions under way by the Council.

Farm Women Societies

Lancaster Society 8

Lancaster Farm Women Society 8 met at Reich's Church on April 14. Following a delicious dessert buffet, Arlene Witmer conducted the business meeting. Rev. Earl Carver presented a delightful talk on health and humor. Members from Society 23 in the Penn Manor area attended as guests.

Members were reminded that the next scheduled event for the society is a field trip and luncheon in an Amish home on May 19.

Lancaster Society 18

Lancaster Farm Women Society 18 met April 17 in the home of Dorothy Brubaker. Spring flower arrangments reflected Dottie's membership in Town and Country Garden Club.

After refreshments, Bear Eckert described his time in South Africa as a volunteer with a youth group sponsored by Calvary Church. The group was an evangelism outreach to many children unable to participate in church or school activities. Eckert showed many handcrafted works of natives. Wood fabrics and straw were represented as artifacts. Snapshots showed points of interest in Africa. According to Eckert, foods such as goat meat and rice were more acceptable to American tastes than grasshoppers and mice. Eckert outlined the influence this disciplined time of faith had on his life.

Seventeen members responded to roll call by naming a favorite sport. Both watching and playing baseball won the most members' votes.

Ella Mae Hershey presented devotional thoughts and the things for which members should be thankful. The scripture reference was about the amazing first miracle performed by Jesus at the wedding feast and his mother's confidence in Him when she said, "Whatever He tells you to do, do it."

County president Allegra Leininger visited the group.

Lettie Nissley reported that a few seats were not reserved for the bus trip May 11 to the beautiful Water Lou Garden Nursery, greenhouses, and gift shops.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Green Grove Community 4-H Club

And they're off! The Green Grove Community 4-H Club had its first organizational meeting on April 10 at the Green Grove Pilgrim Holiness Church.

This year the club numbers 17 members.

Along with fishing and air rifle which were available last year, camping, hiking, backpacking and air pistol have also been added to the list of offered projects. The club was fortunate to have Don Hardic, chairman of the Susquehanna County 4-H Shooting Sports, bring his expertise to this meeting.

After registrations, pledges and introductions, they held elections of officers. Charlie Rigdon was elected president, Mark Musser will serve as vice president, Mike Musser is secretary, and Joel Sickler is treasurer.

Once the business of the meeting was taken care of, members were treated to some refreshments and were able to visit the different project areas. This allowed them a little more "hands on" time to learn about the available projects. The hard part was choosing only two.

Airville 4-H Club

The Airville 4-H meeting was April 20 at Airville Fire Hall.

Rural Life Sunday will be at Pine Grove Church May 16.

Nicole Watkins and Katrina Gore will give a Sunshine Box to Sonni Mayberry, who had an operation. Demonstrations were given by Daniel Watkins, candle making; Nicole Watkins, sewing; Susan Unfried, pet care; and Lauren Jenckins, ceramics.

Kids Ask the Darndest Things

You're sitting around just enjoying the beautiful sunset when all of a sudden your five year-old comes running up and asks, "Where do babies come from?"

Now what is a parent to do?!

Children are naturally curious about most everything in life. At very early stages of development, children put things in their mouths to explore how things feel and taste. After a few more months, children crawl around to explore just how far their world goes. Once they start to walk and develop the very first understandable communication skills, children are asking their first question, "Why?"

This why question usually is a phenomenon of the three-year-old. However, it will emerge again during those early adolescent years. "Why can't I hang out at the mall?" "Why can't I have a body piercing - everyone else has one?"

If you just shuttered, you probably, you probably have a pre-teen, and you can hardly wait for those questions.

By asking questions, children find out what they can and cannot do. They also gain valuable information like just how far they can push the rules and who gives the best answers. By responding to "Do I have to go to bed now?" or "Can I have a glass of water?" they quickly figure out how flexible you are. You can bet that little Johnny or Susie knows they get to stay up a little longer just by smiling and asking the question. And, Maria and Jarnall know that one drink of water leads to two and more time with a parent.

Just who does give the best answers at your house? How often has this happened: Your eight-year-old asks "Can I go play at Henry's house?" You say, "I don't care, but you better ask your father" You then get the response, "Oh, dad said it was OK with him it if was OK with you."

The reality might be that he had never talked to dad, rather he knows that dad would probably say "no" and that the two of you wouldn't discuss this until well after he was gone and having a good time!

Kids also ask questions to get attention. Recently, I watched a five-year-old sit quietly with some adults at a banquet. She was a little bored and needed attention, but her mother was too busy visiting with others. So what better way to get what she needed than by asking a question to the women sitting next to her. "How old are you?" she pleasantly asked the middle-aged lady. It was truly amazing how quickly the little girl's mother was able to give her daughter attention.

Adolescents do the same thing except their questions often have a higher shock value. For example: your 14-year-old comes waltzing in and asks, "Would you be mad if I told you I skipped school today, charged $100 at the store, and drove the van around the block?"

Naturally you yell "YES!" Then he asks, "Can I have $10 to go to the movies tonight?"

With great relief you hand over the $10 bill and whisper how grateful you are he didn't skip school, charge anything, or drive anywhere!

Kids will ask lot of questions throughout their lifetime. Some of them will be challenging such as "Where do babies come from?" or "Why is your hair gray?"

Questions keep us connected. The first sign of being disconnected is when children don't ask questions. So, listen carefully and be ready for whatever your children will ask.

Oh yes, even adult children ask their parents questions, "Mom, can you baby-sit tonight?"

You ask You answer

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

Do not send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply. If we receive the answer, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it.

QUESTION — Howard Pensack, Belvidere, N.J., wants to know where to buy Perfection Wicks 331X for the Perfection kerosene stove.

QUESTION — Don Hannum, Wagontown, has two Chester County dog licenses from 1925 and 1929. Any collectors? Contact him at Box 81, Wagontown, PA 19376-0081.

ANSWER — Thanks to Janet Spangler, York Springs, for sending instructions for raising peanuts. Prepare soil like you prepare to plant a garden. Hoe out a shallow area about 12-15-inches in diameter. Buy peanuts from a seed catalog. Plant one kernel in each 12- to 15-inch area. When you shell the peanut husk, make sure you don't break the red skin on the kernel as the stalk grows and blossoms. Hoe ground up over the blossom each time a new set of blossoms appear. When the plant stops growing, you should have a mound of ground. Wait to dig up the peanut stalks until frost and the stalk turns yellow and dies. Wash ground off the stems and peanuts and hang to dry in an airy place. The blossoms make the peanuts. You can roast peanuts in the shell in the oven. Or shell and fry them for salted nuts. Salt them after they are fried.

POULTRY INDUSTRY RESPONDS TO FOOD SAFETY CONCERNS

David G. Kradel, MS, MPH, DVM

Consumers in the U.S. spend less than 10 percent of their disposable income on food — the lowest in the world. Our farmers and related agribusinesses truly have something of which to be proud. Although the food is probably the safest in the world, concerns about food safety are clearly front-page issues and must be addressed by the entire food chain — from "Farm to Table."

The Pennsylvania poultry industry in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) has responded to this challenge by developing and operating what is recognized nationally as the most comprehensive food safety program at the egg production level in the U.S. This program is the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP).

PEQAP is a voluntary Hazard Analysis Critical Control Points (HACCP)-type program developed to reduce or eliminate Salmonella enteritidis (SE) in the production environment of participating flocks. It addresses the seven elements of a HACCP approach. These are: 1) identification of hazard (SE contamination of eggs), 2) identification of critical control points (CCP) required to control an identified hazard (rodent populations, SE status of chicks/pullets, environmental status of housing for SE), 3) establishing critical limits for each CCP (less than 10 mice caught in 12 live traps during one week period, minimal or no signs of rodent activity, placement of appropriate number of closed bait stations, chick papers SE negative, pullet environments SE negative, satisfactory cleaning and disinfecting between flocks), 4) establishing monitoring procedures for each CCP (indexing of mice using Tin-Cat™ traps, NPIP testing of breeder flocks, testing of 10 percent of chick papers, bacteriological culturing of environment in pullet houses at about 15 weeks and in layer houses at 30 and 45 weeks, testing of eggs if environment is positive, visual inspection of cleaning and disinfecting with completion of evaluation form), 5) determining corrective action if deviations from a critical limit occur (more intensive rodent control efforts, testing and/or diversion of eggs if environment is positive, correction of C & D deficiencies, dedicated egg diversion or vaccination and/or intensive testing if positive chicks or positive pullet environment), 6) establishing effective record keeping procedures and documentation (records kept of rodent indexing and control procedures, bacterial culturing results, cleaning and disinfecting evaluation, chick and pullet sources. Records on file with PDA and/or at farm or processing plant), and 7) establishing procedures for verifying that HACCP plan is working effectively (rodent indexing, bacteriological culturing of environments and/or eggs, record review on farm and PDA office, third party farm visits by Animal Health Technicians of PDA. In addition we have added what we believe is an eighth essential elements for HACCP-type programs - continuing education of participants and servicing personnel.

PEQAP utilizes the information gained in the SE Pilot Project and other studies to address the major risk factors associated with the occurrence of SE in the production environment. These major risk factors are rodents, prior environmental contamination, and prior chick or pullet infection.

An Executive Committee (Oversight Committee) that meets approximately monthly makes recommendations regarding the program. Committee membership includes representatives from all segments of the shell egg industry — producers, Poultry Council of PennAg Industries Association, USDA, PDA, Penn State, University of Pennsylvania, and the Pennsylvania Department of Health. The meetings are open to all interested parties.

PEQAP is monitored by the PDA. The PDA receives and reviews copies of records including participant agreement forms, placement and scheduling information, testing results from the three state-supported diagnostic laboratories, cleaning and disinfecting evaluations, rodent indexing and egg diversion information. The PDA also monitors on-farm compliance with management procedures and record keeping requirements through periodic visits by trained animal health technicians working closely with company servicemen.

As of May 1999, 320 commercial egg-laying flocks representing about 95 percent of the 22 million layer population in Pennsylvania is enrolled in PEQAP. In addition, the chick and pullet suppliers to these flocks are required to meet PEQAP program requirements.

Although the program is "voluntary" and has no requirements imposed by a regulatory agency, the major egg processors and marketers require their source flocks to participate in the program. PEQAP is estimated to cost $1.4 million a year. The estimated cost to industry participants is $1 million per year, exclusive of the cost involved when eggs must be diverted to pasteurization. The laboratory testing costs ($200,000/year) and third party monitoring costs ($200,000 per year) are borne by the PDA.

The apparent success of PEQAP is indicated by the fact that while on a national basis the percent of flocks positive for SE increased from 27 percent (1991) to 45 percent (1995), the frequency of environmentally positive flocks in Pennsylvania has been reduced almost 70 percent in a three-year period — from 38 percent of the flocks and 23 percent of the samples in 1992 to 13 percent of the flocks and 3.2 percent of the samples in 1995. As of May 1999, two percent of the samples are positive.

The Pennsylvania experience suggests that with consistent dedication to the management and testing programs required for participation in PEQAP, SE in production environment can be reduced or eliminated. Setbacks can be experienced in occasional flocks. It is believed that these setbacks may result from less well defined and presumably less significant risk factors including undetected chick or pullet infections, incomplete decontamination within or outside the house continuing mice infestation, contamination of supplies or equipment returning to the farm, and inadequate biosecurity measures. The limitations associated with sampling and testing could also be involved.

As would be true of any HACCP-type or Best Management Practice (BMP) program dealing with potential bacterial pathogens in the environment, PEQAP can't guarantee shell eggs to be free of SE contamination. It does assure commitment of the producer to implementation of those management and monitoring practices most likely to prevent SE contamination. PEQAP participants are assuring the public that they are taking every reasonable precaution to assure the safety of shell eggs.

The value of a HACCP-type program such as PEQAP in shell egg production flocks includes the following: 1) all sectors of the food chain (from farm to table) have a responsibility to do their share in food safety. PEQAP is an example of the production sector doing its share. 2) Markets will increasingly require their suppliers to be involved in a food safety oriented quality assurance program. 3) Being involved in a good HACCP-type program should provide the producer some protection against potential liability if an SE case or outbreak occurs and the source of eggs is traced back to the farm. The HACCP programs in production need to be recognized as risk reduction programs not complete risk elimination. 4) If the industry is pro-active in developing reasonable HACCP-type programs of a voluntary nature, the likelihood of mandatory or regulatory-type programs is decreased. For instance, the poultry and red meat processing industries are being required to develop and operate very detailed and expensive HACCP programs. Salmonella entoritidis as an increasing public health problem (since 1985 SE has increased from 5 percent to more than 30 percent of confirmed Salmonella cases) could be a good candidate for public mandated governmental action. 5) The management procedures used in a HACCP-type program also have other benefits not related to public health. For instance, rodent control will reduce fire hazards (wire chewing); destruction of insulation (nesting) and possibly other rodent related diseases. Thorough cleaning and disinfecting between flocks can reduce problems with other poultry diseases and provide a more favorable working environment. 6) The poultry industry has always worked to produce a safe, nutritious, quality product at reasonable cost. A HACCP-type or BMP program to further address food safety is an extension of this continued commitment. 7) PEQAP provides a good model for the voluntary cooperation of industry, government, and academia in addressing a problem.

HOOBER

5/7/99
Dear Valued Customer,

Hoober, Inc. is planning a special event. Every person involved in production agriculture has experienced the negative effects of low commodity and/or livestock prices in the last year. We are no different. Difficult times, however, also produce significant opportunities.

In order to reduce our inventory of Used Equipment, we have decided to offer a special "CHOPPING BLOCK" sale. During this "CHOPPING BLOCK" sale you have an incredible opportunity to upgrade your equipment at incredible savings. Starting prices will be cut every day of the sale, allowing for potential savings to you of up to 20% by the last day of the sale. In order to make this "CHOPPING BLOCK SALE" even more attractive, we are including several dozen items of new equipment.

We have made available our entire inventory of used equipment - over 400 individual items. All equipment will be located at the store where it was traded. Every item has been photographed so you can preview any sale items at the Hoober, Inc. location nearest to you. Or you can access the Hoober, Inc. internet website at www.hoober.com/used/used.frame.html to view pictures off all our used inventory from the comfort of your home.

We appreciate your business. We hope that you can use this special opportunity to acquire some machinery items you need at special savings.

Thank you,

Charlie

Charles B. Hoober, Jr.,
President

PRICES ARE REDUCED EVERY DAY!

- BID & WAIT... IF THE PRICE DROPS TO YOUR BID PRICE YOU GET THE PIECE, BUT IF SOMEONE BIDS HIGHER, YOU'RE OUT OF LUCK
- OR GET THE PIECE YOU WANT NOW BY PAYING THE CURRENT "CHOPPING BLOCK" PRICE!

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN SAVE AS MUCH AS $25,000 ON USED INVENTORY

Starting Monday May 18 and for 10 business days, (the price of every piece of used inventory is reduce 1% or 2%). If you wait until the end of the sale, (May 28) you'll be able to save at least 10% and as much as 20% on every tractor, every combine every planter or drill and every other piece in our extensive inventory. But beware, we are inviting more people to our store than ever before. Some customers won't wait till the end of the sale, and will buy what they need before prices are reduced the full 10–20%. If you wait till the final day of the sale, you might need to find a substitute for the piece that was bought before you bought it.

STEP 1: HOOBER REDUCES PRICES

The start (pre-sale price) is reduced from the original asking price on many used items. We then separated every piece of equipment into 2 categories. The first category will be reduced 20% (2% a day) and the rest has been reduced 10% (1% a day). Each business day from Tuesday, May 18 through Friday, May 28. Act early for assurance or wait for maximum savings!

STEP 2: EVERY SALE ITEM TAGGED

Wander the lot to find your bargain.

STEP 3: YOU SAVE THOUSANDS ON HOOBER'S MASSIVE INVENTORY

Every farmer gets Hoober service at sacrificed prices!!! Some farmers are sure to get what they need by buying before the last days of the sale. Other farmers will wait for the last day of the sale. Some of those who waited, will be rewarded by receiving the maximum savings, others will arrive at the Hoober lot to find the bargain they wanted was sold earlier...

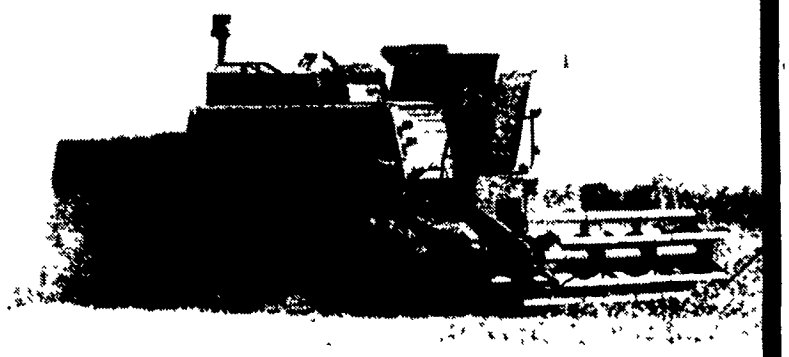
JOHN DEERE JOHN DEERE

BECAUSE YOUR DAY DOESN'T START AT 9:00 AM...



OURS DOESN'T EITHER

When you work the land, you don't have the luxury of working 9 to 5. You need to be available all day, every day...and if your equipment breaks down, you need it fixed now, not tommorrow at 3:00.

Deer Creek understands the way you work. That's why we're here when you need us with parts and service 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Where you buy a product is often as important as what you buy!

Put us to the test! Service when you need it.

The CLAAS® Quadrant 1200 square baler – The new standard equipment for commercial operators New and Used 1200s Coming In CLAAS doesn't have to sell a commercial operator on the advantages he gets from large, densely-packed square bales.

Yes, the Quadrant 1200 delivers that density commercial operators want. Yes, its bales inhibit spoilage by keeping the air out. Yes, they preserve quality because they minimize nutrient loss.

The 1200 also offers the high production capacities you demand. Its 4 ft x 2-1/4 ft x up to 8 ft long bales effectively increase storage space and dramatically increase transport capacities–all at a high productivity rate. And you know what this means to your bottom line.

The Quadrant makes easy work of dry hay, haylage and silage crops–whatever you've got. And it bales as much of it as you've got CLAAS's shaft-driven knotters have earned a worldwide reputation for reliability and low maintenance Other notable features are its 3-stage pre-chamber, 78" wide pickup, powerful transmission, heavy-duty worm gear, 1000rpm pto, hydraulic density control, capacity for up to 24 balls of sisal or plastic twine, and of course 6 dependable CLAAS shaft-driven knotters.

Production capacity Convenient handling and storage Economical transport Density and quality A better bottom line

For more information about the Quadrant and how it can meet your commercial needs, contact the CLAAS dealer listed below

Incidently, CLAAS quality is also available in a smaller Quadrant model designed for dairy operators.

Is your TMR Mixer limiting your ability to reduce feed costs?

The NDE Vertical Mixer cuts and blends whatever you may have available: round bale silage, dry hay bales of any size, cotton seed, distillers grain, cannery by-products, etc. A TRUE TMR not only gives your cows exactly what they need to reach top production, but also allows you to purchase feed stuffs economically, and mix them into a palatable, easily digestible, readily eaten feed.

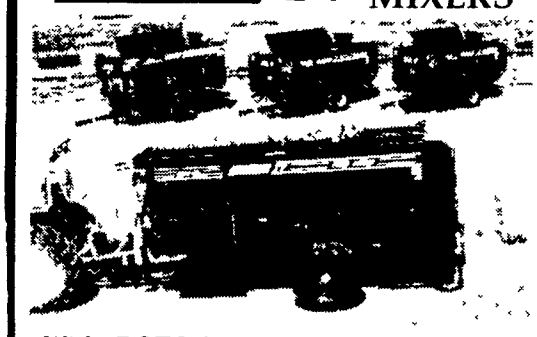
ROTO-MIX IV FEED MIXERS



With ROTO-MIX IV you reduce fines, minimize shrinkage, and eliminate dead spots. The gentle tumbling action mixes fragile flaked and high-moisture ingredients without grinding, resulting in a fluffier, more nutritional ration.

The ROTO-MIX end-to-end... side-to-side mixing system provides the most thorough TMR available, ensuring that your cattle will consume a balanced ration of nutrients in every pound of feed they eat.

Meyers Implements Receives Dealer Award

GREENCASTLE (Franklin Co.) — Meyers Implements was recently rewarded by Claas of America, Inc. with an etched glass plaque for being the #1 round baler dealer in the northeast region for 1998. From left, Steve Swadley, sales; Kurtis Meyers, sales; Frankie Wilbert, northeast regional manager; Ron Reed, manufacturing representative; Kevin Meyers comptroller; and Jaye Meyers, president.

Topdresser Hopper Becomes Loader

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The Earth and Turf Scoop & Spread™ topdresser employs an exclusively designed hopper that tilts backward hydraulically and becomes a loader to scoop up topdressing material.

The Scoop & Spread hopper is lowered into the scoop position by means of two standard 2x12 hydraulic cylinders. The cylinders are controlled from the tractor seat by means of the tractor remote valve. This allows the operator to load and dress without leaving the tractor seat. After loading, the hopper is raised to the travel position and transported to the topdressing area. Upon lowering the unit to the turf, the material stop gate opens automatically and the ground-driven spreading and agitator mechanisms are engaged.

The Scoop & Spread is used to spread dry, "flowable" material on athletic fields, lawns, and golf courses. The 51-inch spread pattern allows top-dressing to be distributed in an even and consistent manner. The 15-cubic-foot hopper is constructed of welded 10 and 12-gauge steel, giving integral strength while keeping the overall unit weight to a minimum. Earth & Turf recommends that a tractor with a minimum of 26 h.p. and front weights, or a loader, be used when operating the Scoop & Spread

Company Gets Grass Distribution Rights

OGDENSBURG, N.J. — Matua prairie grass (Bromus Catharticus) has been sold in the United States for almost 10 years now. It is popular because cool-season forage grass manages to survive in areas with severe summer stress. It is also a variety that has proven to be able to utilize manure very well.

Dr. Vivian Allen of Texas Tech has done research on the nitrogen uptake capacity of this particular variety. Matua showed increased production up to a level of 800 units of nitrogen per acre. Also at the Noble Foundation trials in Oklahoma Matua has performed very well.

Many farmers in different states have good experience with using Matua for their wastewater management program. Recently NRCS of North Carolina placed the specie on the recommended list for wastewater management plans.

So far, both ABT and Barenbrug USA have been importing Matua out of New Zealand. The owners of the variety in New Zealand preferred an exclusive distribution in North America. They gave the exclusivity to Barenbrug USA because of both past sales and the present marketing plan are in favor of Barenbrug USA.

After last year's drought, many farmers in the South are looking for a good forage grass to plant their pastures with. Matua will give them high yields of very high quality hay providing good animal performance.

Barenbrug is in the process of establishing a good and reliable distribution network for Matua. They will also start a new promotion campaign focused on th[illegible] users emphasizing the differ[illegible] great qualities of Matua.

Case Consolidates Agricultural Implement Business

RACINE, Wis. — Case Corporation (NYSE:CSE) said it is strengthening its agricultural implement business by consolidating all product development and selected manufacturing of tillage and soil preparation equipment at the Case SMI facility in Goodfield, Ill.

This transfer will facilitate the company's previously announced closure of its Hamilton, Ontario, plant, which is now expected to be completed by mid-year. In addition, Case is finalizing plans for the transfer of other products currently being made in the Hamilton plant, including planting, seeding and materials handling equipment, to the Case Concord plant in Fargo, N.D., as well as to existing company joint ventures and third party partners.

"We strengthened our line of agricultural systems during the past three years through the acquisition of air-till drills, sprayers, soil preparation equipment and information and control systems, enabling us to provide our customers with complete solutions for production agriculture," said Jean-Pierre Rosso, Case chairman and chief executive officer. "Now we are integrating the operations of these businesses and simultaneously increasing our new product development initiatives and the application of our AFS technology to fully leverage the opportunities which these acquisitions provide to help us serve our customers."

The consolidation of research, development, and manufacturing of common products in established areas of expertise is expected to improve and strengthen Case's current and future implement business, which has been a key company initiative. Case acquired DMI in 1998, which is widely recognized as the leader in soil management systems and represents Case's global center for soil management expertise. Concord was acquired by Case in 1996, and is recognized as the North American leader in air-till drills and seeders, which are growing in use among farmers of small grains. This consolidated focus will also enhance dealer and field representative training on the use of these products and Case's systems approach.

Case intends to integrate its Advanced Farming Systems (AFS) technology across all of its product lines and develop value-added systems of agricultural equipment that meet the needs of farmers around the world. The steps announced today enable Case to build on recent new product introductions, most notably AFS planters and drills These products, which will be in use for the first time this spring, offer capabilities to automatically adjust seed, chemical and fertilizer rates on-the-go during field operations. A new 1200 series Advanced Seed Meter (ASM) planter, with superior in-row spacing, is also adjustable for first use this spring.

Brillion Announces Three-Point Hitch Model Of Floating Ring Pulverizer

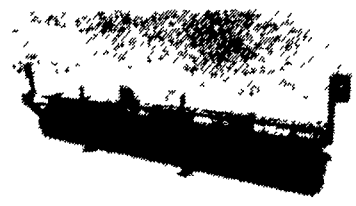
BRILLION, Wis. — Responding to customer requests, Brillion Farm Equipment offers its popular Floating Ring Pulverizer in a three-point hitch model.

"Our Floating Ring Pulverizer design creates a more uniform seedbed for optimum germination," said Tim Geary, marketing services manager for Brillion. "Several of our customers asked if we could design our Floating Ring Pulverizer in a three-point hitch model, so we did."

By mounting this new pulverizer onto a coulter cart, producers can prepare the perfect seedbed and plant in one operation. When mounted directly to a tractor, the three-point hitch pulverizer model offers exceptional maneuverability in tight field conditions, while offering the same unique floating ring system of pull-type models.

Each ring fits over a large drum with a smaller diameter than the ring. This space allows each ring to move up and down independently, allowing the floating-ring pulverizer to act as one large, flexible tool that follows the contour of the ground more closely than standard pulverizer models.

The three-point hitch pulverizer is available in 6-, 8-, 10-, 12-, 14-, and 16-foot wide models to match a variety of farming operations. Operating weights range from 1,601 pounds to 3,924 pounds.



The three-point hitch Floating Ring Pulverizer from Brillion Farm Equipment offers exceptional maneuverability in tight field conditions, while offering the same unique floating ring system of pull-type models. By mounting this new Pulverizer onto a counter cart, producers can prepare the seedbed and plant in one operation.

IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR

Fly Control

Horn and face flies are the most typical pests in our region. They are historically difficult to control because of the ready source of a reproductive environment (fresh manure) in free-ranging, grazing cattle.

Following are some methods for control with some advantages and disadvantages.

• Direct application: This will be the most effective control at a single point in time, but these sprays and foggers generally do not last long enough. Therefore, the life cycle of the flies will not be sufficiently interrupted without frequent treatments.

• Rubs: Like direct applications, frequent applications are necessary for effective control. Insecticide-impregnated face and back rubs can be effective controls as long as there is a consistent supply of material available in the rubs and when the cattle consistently use them. They should be placed in resting areas and around feed and water sources so the cattle will use them. They should probably not be placed inside a barn because neither horn or face flies will stay inside a barn.

• Larvacides: These materials are either fed to the animals through a mineral or grain feed, or are dosed to them as a bolus that has a slow release in the rumen. The chemical agent in the larvacide prevents the growth of the fly while developing in the manure pile. They do nothing to control adult flies, particularly if cattle across a fence or nearby have not been controlled with a larvacide. They can be an effective part of a control program that includes other forms of control, such as direct application of insecticides.

• Insecticidal ear tags: The use of insecticide ear tags is still effective in our region since few resistances to the insecticides have been found. There are three major categories of insecticides used in tags, and the category of material should be rotated annually. These include organophosphates, synthetic pyrethroids, and combinations of the two. One tag per animal is usually sufficient. They can be used in combination with a larvacide. The tags should be removed at the end of the fly season to help prevent resistance.

• Pour-ons: Some of the effective insecticides are now available in a long-lasting, pour-on delivery product. Check with your animal supply dealer to see what is available.

It is also recommended that the use of larvacides and insecticidal car tags be delayed until mid-summer if possible since peak fly populations in this area will usually be in August.

Bull Use

Remember, the easiest way to control the management of a beef herd is through controlled, condensed calving seasons. This allows the most effective nutrition, health, and marketing to occur.

Bulls should be prepared for turnout by making sure they are healthy and in good physical shape. New bulls should have a breeding soundness examination if at all possible.

Unfortunately, there are few veterinarians in the state that are equipped for this examination. The bull to cow ratio will help insure that calves are born early in the calving season because the cows are bred when they cycle the first time. This increases weaning weights and rebreeding rates next year.

Yearling bulls should be limited to 15 cows, 2-year-olds to 30 cows, and mature bulls to 45 cows. Many bulls can service more cows in the breeding season, but the loss of breeding for one heat cycle can result in 30-40 pounds less calf to sell. Another perspective is that a bull asked to breed 60 cows in 60 days will have to average a mating per day. When there are two cows in heat, most bulls will be able to handle it. But when there are three, or when there are environmental problams such as a week of hot, humid weather, there will usually be fewer pounds of calf to sell or there will be an open cow.

Calf Management

Calf management now can make a real difference in the dollars they return later. Castrate the males with a knife, at an early age (less than two months of age), to help reduce the distress of the practice. Any advantage of waiting and allowing the calf to remain a bull to capture the growth advantage of bulls can be compromised by the recovery period from castration at an older age.

Identify the calves to match the cow identification so the less productive cows can be identified and culled. Use implants in the calves that will not be used for breeding.

At any reasonable growth rate the implant can have a 8X return rate. In areas where blackleg is a problem, vaccinate calves with a clostridial vaccine. There are several good ones available, including those that are a subcutaneous, 2-cc dose. Booster them at weaning.

Having Problems Getting Milk Cold?

Summer heat will soon be here. Plan now with a Mueller pre-cooler. It's an excellent way to lower the cost of cooling milk. It reduces milk temperature with water pumped straight out of your well. Mueller® precoolers are available in sizes to work with any system. If lower electric bills would make your life easier, call us and ask for more information on Mueller precoolers.

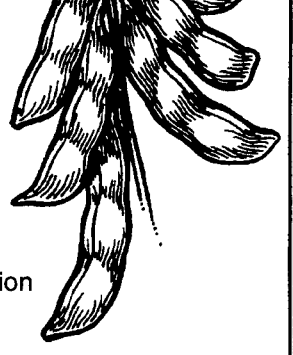
Sell your beans?

"It just doesn't make sense"



1. Why loose the 18% high energy oil in your own beans?
2. Why let the soybean processor take the valuable lechicin?
3. Why forfeit 50% of the metabolizable energy over SBM?
4. Why pay storage, trucking and shrink?

Be sensible! Let SCHNUPP'S custom roast your Soybeans

Receive the value of added fat in your ration - MORE MILK

Get the most By-Pass Protein available in your beans - MORE PROTEIN UPTAKE

Keep all the nutritional components originally in the soybean. - MORE FLEXIBILITY

CONSOLIDATED NUTRITION, L.C.

Hey They're Only Heifers!

- They're only the end result of your breeding program
- In most herds they will only comprise 40% of the milking herd during their first lactation
- They're only a big part of herd's future
- And if you don't have them fresh between 22 and 24 months of age, they will cost you $2 to $3 per day through lost production and increased housing and labor expenses.

So If They're All of These Things...

Why not feed them one of the most technically advanced feeding programs available today?

CONSOLIDATED NUTRITION'S NEW Ultra BALANCE™ REPLACEMENT HEIFER SYSTEM

A flexible program designed to provide optimal replacement heifer nutrition. This exciting new program includes:

CN proprietary sugar blend:

- Stimulates rumen development
- Stimulates appetite
- Increases Average Daily Gain
- Improved Feed Efficiency

Yeast Culture

- Stimulates dry matter intake
- Promote early rumen development
- All Plant Proteins

For those producers desiring greater growth rates, ask your Consolidated Nutrition representative about the Accelerated Growth Rate Program.
